New Emphasis On The Gifted Stirs Discontent

By PATTY BEUTLER and GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writers

When Suzy can do calculus while her classmates struggle with addition, something should be done.

For almost five years now, educators have been trying in Lincoln to do... something... for gifted children. But few so far are satisfied.

The relatively new emphasis on the gifted has stirred up an undercurrent of discontent, muddied by parental emotions.

At least one program was eliminated because of hostilities it generated among classmates, siblings and parents.

Some say not enough is being done, while others contend their children were better off before they were labeled as "gifted."

Definition is part of the problem. Minimum criteria are set by the State Board of Education. To qualify, a child must be in at least the 96th percentile in either an IQ test or an academic achievement test and not lower than the 90th percentile in the other test.

From 120 Over The Top

Under those standards, nearly 3,800 students, about 14%, qualify in Lincoln schools. In that group the IQ scores range from 120 to off the scale.

That is too broad a spectrum and unwieldy a group, many believe.

One gifted student, in a letter-to-the-editor column, wrote that it was harmful to him when he was thrown into a class with "four or five students who could teach calculus at Harvard."

When lumped together, those on the lower end of the gifted scale can't keep up, while those at the top are held back from exploring their limits, say the parents of a highly gifted child.

A movement is underway in Lincoln schools to create another category for those at the top of the scale.

A task force on the gifted has targeted exceptional students for "top priority" in program planning for the next school year.

Preliminary testing indicates some 76 youngsters might be eligible for highly individualized instruction. Some $25,000 for contracted services, such as tutors, resource people or university courses, is included in the 1976-77 school board budget — the only specific line item earmarked for the gifted.

Retesting Due In Autumn

However, many of this group were identified with a Slosson test, now regarded more as a quick screening device than an accurate indicator. Retesting of these youngsters is scheduled for fall.

"To label a child in a gifted category when he is in the 120 IQ range gives me some worry," says Jody Batten, consultant for the gifted student program with the Lincoln public schools. She would prefer telling parents they have a "capable" child.

Some people contend that labeling so many children as "gifted" creates an aura of hostility, jealousy and resentment.

At Sheridan Elementary School a "language arts" program for the gifted was canceled this year because of that criticism.

"Everyone knew what was happening at Sheridan," said Mrs. Batten. "Kids would lose sleep the summer before 4th grade, worrying if they'd be in the 'gifted' class."

But the program drew praise from parents who had children in the program. Parent Bob Gibson says the program was "extremely beneficial" for his son.

Gibson says he understands the criticism that the program was becoming a symbol of social status, but adds he has hopes for similar programs that might be less visible.

At the same time, however, he contends that with or without official label, "I think kids know who they are and where they are."

Some Teachers Disillusioned

Although programs like that at Sheridan, where gifted students were grouped together two hours a day, have some enthusiastic supporters, some teachers have become disillusioned with segregating smarter students.

Elementary school teacher Pam Rathe, who taught a summer school class for gifted children, says she was surprised by the lack of creativity and initiative the students displayed together.

During the regular school year, when she taught gifted students as part of larger classes, she found they "instill in others creative thinking and competition."

But for the genius category youngsters, she thinks "something very necessarily should be done above and beyond what they can get in the classroom."

Some teachers have successfully set up individualized study for their highly gifted students.

Because the Lincoln school system is decentralized, development of specific programs is left to administrators at each school.

Her Office Has Clout

Suggestions and planning guides come from Mrs. Batten, but the consultant says her office is not without clout. "If we see what is being suggested is not being done, there are ways to see that it happens."

Parents, however, have said that follow-up programs have been slow in developing, despite the influx of state funds based on the number of gifted students identified.

Last year Lincoln schools received $225,000 for programs for the gifted out of a total of about $540,000 distributed statewide. Funds are disbursed at individual schools.

"The schools are forcing parents to come in and demand things and the publicity makes the child more of a freak than he is," say the parents of a highly gifted child.

One couple blames the stalling on administrators who "for all practical purposes refuse to admit there are highly gifted kids," who have special needs.

Many educators, they say, believe gifted children will learn on their own. But the couple points at programs for slow learners and argues that bright children should also have special attention.

"It's difficult to generate a sympathy for the gifted, and for the highly gifted, it's worse," the couple contends.

Fence Jumper Shot Dead

Washington (AP) — A man carrying a three-foot section of pipe climbed over the White House fence Sunday night and was fatally shot by a guard when he failed to heed orders to halt, a Secret Service spokesman said.

The man, identified as 30-year-old Chester Plummer of Washington, died at George Washington Hospital soon after being shot, according to Ken Lynch of the Secret Service.

President Ford, who was in the second floor family quarters of the White House at the time, was informed of the shooting, said Deputy White House Press Secretary John Carlson.

The man set off an alarm when he scaled the fence and an Executive Protective Service officer went to investigate, said Jack Warner, a Secret Service spokesman. Warner said the intruder disregarded repeated orders to stop and the officer shot him.

The man was about 60 feet inside the fence when the single shot was fired, Warner said.

The officer who shot the intruder was Pvt. Charles A. Garland, a Secret Service spokesman said.

An eyewitness said the man climbed over the fence on the Pennsylvania Avenue side of the White House and was carrying a three-foot section of pipe that he was using as a cane.

Judith Witherow, the eyewitness, was among a group of demonstrators carrying out a pro-EQUAL Rights Amendment vigil in front of the White House. She gave this account:

Before going over the fence, the man had been walking around the area carrying the pipe for about 45 minutes.

At one point, he stepped up to the fence but then stepped away when nearby police sirens were heard in connection with an unrelated traffic incident.

He then walked toward the northeast corner of the White House and climbed over the fence.

"Then all the lights went on and we heard a gunshot," she said. "We saw the police giving heart massage."

Another demonstrator, Susan Knapp, said "the suspect was in the driveway, about halfway up" to the White House, when he was shot. A White House spokesman later said the man was about 60 feet inside the fence when he was shot.

There have been a number of attempts in recent years to gain entrance to the White House.

Solid steel gates that are supposed to be crash-proof were installed recently after some automobiles were able to penetrate the older gates, which were installed in 1818.

The most recent gate crashing occurred Christmas Day 1974 when a man who said he wanted to deliver a copy of the Koran to President Ford rammed a Pennsylvania Avenue gate entrance.

Last year, a young man scaled the White House fence and approached within a few feet of Susan Ford, the President's daughter, before being arrested. The man, who had previously been involved in a similar incident, said he was trying to see the President to ask for a pardon for his father, who had been convicted of heroin-smuggling charges.

Amin Makes Threat Over Kenyan Oil

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin hinted anew Sunday at possible military action against neighboring Kenya, accusing it of an economic blockade that has left Uganda with only enough gasoline to operate emergency vehicles for five days.

"This may force Uganda to resort to desperate action," Amin was quoted as saying by Radio Uganda. It echoed his Saturday warning that Uganda might have to "fight for its survival."

The broadcast, monitored here, also said Amin asked the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity to intervene in the dispute by dispatching fact-finding missions to Uganda and Kenya.

Kenya denied again that it had imposed a blockade and declared that the problem was solely Amin's failure to settle past debts and pay cash for future needs.

"If he attacks Kenya, Kenya will be bound to... defend herself, but... we have no interest in fighting Uganda," Kenyan Foreign Minister Munyu Waiyaki said Sunday.

"If the blockade that Amin is referring to is based on the fact that we have demanded cash payment, then we must tell him we are under no obligation to subsidize the Uganda economy," Waiyaki said, suggesting Amin should turn to "wealthier" countries, presumably meaning oil-rich Libya, with which Uganda has close ties.

Radio Uganda said Amin messaged U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and OAU Secretary-General Eteki Mbomoum, asking them to send fact-finding missions to verify that Kenya is allowing only one gasoline tank truck a day to reach Uganda.

A U.N. spokesman in New York said he knew of no such request.

Uganda claims that 300 tank trucks loaded with fuel for Uganda are being prevented by Kenya from entering the country.

Kenya says it has stopped the shipment of oil and gasoline to Uganda because the Amin government has not paid for previous supplies and owes it $54 million. Kenya buys crude oil from Arab countries, refines it at the port of Mombasa and transports it to Uganda.

The flow of other goods to Uganda has also been interrupted by truckers refusing to enter Uganda, saying they fear for their lives at the hands of Amin's troops.

The Ugandan president's veiled threat of force to get vital fuel seemed to contradict his repeated assurances last week that Uganda would never invade Kenya. The assurance was in a message from Amin to President Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya.

Uganda Radio said Amin has sent "innumerable messages" to Kenyatta, to no avail.

The Kenyan government said it has not responded to Amin because of "Amin's unpredictable attitudes and because we believe he is trying to cool down his people due to the shortage of commodities."

Board Beats Mill Levy Problem

By NANCY HICKS

Star Staff Writer

After a week of long hours and hard cuts, Lancaster County commissioners conquered the mill levy problem and brought county budgets in line with the amount of money the county can raise in taxes this year.

During the week, the three commissioners cut about $1 million from the more than 35 departmental budget requests, bringing the mill levy requirement down to between 13.3 to 13.6 mills. That's about 1.6 mills above last year's 11.995 levy.

The county's statutory mill levy ceiling is 14.28 mills. One mill equals $1 per $1,000 of assessed property valuation.

The current mill levy requirement includes a maximum cost of living increase for county employees beginning in September. Most county employees also are eligible during the year for a 5% merit increase under the county's personnel plan, in addition to any cost of living raise.

Last year, county employees were granted a 10% cost of living increase in order to keep their wages comparable to city employees who work across the hall in the County-City Building.

Though commissioners have not voted on the 5% cost of living increase, most discussion during the week centered around not exceeding that figure.

Because the county is so near the mill levy ceiling, commissioners feel they can not grant cost of living increases similar to city employees if the city goes above the 5% figure.

Commissioners are anticipating another year of low property valuations before the 1976 appraisal figures are raised on the tax rolls, thus another year of limited tax income.

Commissioners are hoping to make a few more budget cuts this week to bring the levy down to 13.28 or one mill below the levy maximum. This will give some leeway for cost of living increases and growth during the 1977-78 budget year, even if property values are not increasing.

Sunday morning the County Board further refined the budgets, transferring some large equipment purchases off the mill levy and into federal revenue sharing funds.

These shifts included about $200,000 in equipment from one of the county engineer's budgets, more than $200,000 in equipment and remodeling from the Lancaster Manor budget and some support for the county building fund, according to Commissioner Jan Gauger.

Budget figures and levy estimates will be completed early this week. And the board has scheduled a public hearing on the proposed budget for Aug. 10 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers.

The total budget, including federal grants and revenue from fees, is expected to top last year's $22.7 million total.

Differences In Centers Extreme

By DICK HOLMAN

Extreme differences discovered among regional community mental health center operations indicate the State Department of Public Institutions (DPI) isn't properly exercising its authority over them, according to a state audit.

The centers made up an $8.5 million sub-agency in the fiscal year that ended June 30.

The present regional variations in organizational structure, program emphasis and record-keeping prevent any meaningful evaluation of the statewide mental health program," the audit observed.

Action Recommended

"We recommend that the DPI take action to implement and/or improve overall statewide program guidance, direction, accountability and responsibility," the audit concludes.

The last of the performance audits (now discontinued), the community mental health program review suggested "a need for positive and immediate action" to put the structure on an even keel.

Problems were caused partly "by the rapid growth of this program. During the first six months of FY76, the number of people receiving mental health services increased by over 30%."

"Our further review," the audit said, "revealed that much knowledge and experience regarding mental health facilities, programs and services exist throughout (Nebraska). These resources could be utilized to develop a uniform statewide mental health program, which could benefit the entire state."

Cost-Benefit Can't Be Fired

Auditors called on DPI to put guidance and accountability into effect where they don't exist or to improve them where they do. The auditors added that "a detailed cost-benefit determination cannot be made at this time because of the overall (non-uniform) structure" across each of the 10 center operations.

Auditors examined all six mental health regions to determine what control DPI exercised over them from July 1 through Dec. 31, 1975. No financial audit was performed. Interviews were conducted with mental health center and DPI employees, and records were inspected.

The 1974 Legislature created the community mental health center organization. LB302 set up six regional governing boards of county officials.

The law directed DPI "to exercise full authority over the initial organization" of the first state-organized and -financed centers, providing for local participation in all aspects. Although "certain programs and administrative duties were delegated to the regional boards, overall responsibility stayed at the state level," the audit noted.

LB302 empowered the DPI medical services director to set up mental health center rules, but according to the audit, that post was empty from August 1975 through April 1976, when a part-timer was appointed.

Reiterating the emphasis that differences in all six regions make their responsibilities and effectiveness "very difficult" to establish, let alone evaluate, the audit cited these areas as system-deficient in varying degrees:

Differences In Centers Extreme

By DICK HOLMAN

Star Staff Writer

Extreme differences discovered among regional community mental health center operations indicate the State Department of Public Institutions (DPI) isn't properly exercising its authority over them, according to a state audit.

The centers made up an $8.5 million sub-agency in the fiscal year that ended June 30.

The present regional variations in organizational structure, program emphasis and record-keeping prevent any meaningful evaluation of the statewide mental health program, which could benefit the entire state.

Cost-Benefit Can't Be Fixed

Auditors called on DPI to put guidance and accountability into effect where they don't exist or to improve them where they do. The auditors added that "a detailed cost-benefit determination cannot be made at this time because of the overall (non-uniform) structure" across each of the 10 center operations.

Auditors examined all six mental health regions to determine what control DPI exercised over them from July 1 through Dec. 31, 1975. No financial audit was performed. Interviews were conducted with mental health center and DPI employees, and records were inspected.

The 1974 Legislature created the community mental health center organization. LB302 set up six regional governing boards of elected county officials.

The law directed DPI "to exercise full authority over the initial organization" of the first state-organized and -financed centers, providing for local participation in all aspects. Although "certain programs and administrative duties were delegated to the regional boards, overall responsibility stayed at the state level," the audit notes.

LB302 empowered the DPI medical services director to set up mental health center rules, but according to the audit, that post was empty from August 1975 through April 1976, when a part-time was appointed.

Reiterating the emphasis that differences in all six regions make their responsibilities and effectiveness "very difficult" to establish, let alone evaluate, the audit cited these areas as system-deficient in varying degrees:

Management information, accounting methods, record-keeping, emphasis on client services, sources and amounts of funding, patient billings and policies, organizational methods and personnel policies.

Variation From 5% to 33%

For example, the audit found that administrative costs as part of the total budget varied from 5% in the Lincoln-Lancaster County center, to a high of 33% at Great Plains.

The centers get funding from the federal and state governments, counties and client fees. The audit found that income sources among the centers' budgets ranged from zero to 74% in federal money, 1% to 60% from the state, 1% to 22% from counties, and 4% to 80% in client-generated dollars.

"All of these differences could hinder the state in implementing and enforcing policy decisions, such as uniform standards and regulations

Ford Said To Have Protested Soviet Radiation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford sent a personal appeal to Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev urging that the Soviets curtail their microwave bombardment of the U.S. embassy in Moscow, according to Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Dole said he was told of the President's letter to Brezhnev during a closed-door briefing on the Moscow radiation problem by Helmut Sonnenfeldt, one of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's closest associates.

Following the Ford letter and U.S. diplomatic efforts to protest over the radiation, as well as an embassy staff meeting that led to widespread publicity, the Soviets reduced the microwave power levels. However, they have refused to cease the bombardment completely.

A White House spokesman, John Carlson, said there have been U.S.-Soviet contacts on the radiation issue at various levels and "there has been communication — correspondence — between the President and Brezhnev." He declined to give any further details.

The radiation problem has caused concern among current and former American personnel at the Moscow embassy that long-term exposure to the low-level microwaves might result in adverse health or behavioral effects.

Dole, who had voiced criticism over U.S. handling of the microwaves affair, said in an interview that Sonnenfeldt apparently mentioned the Ford letter — dispatched about seven months ago — to impress upon the senator that "we weren't taking this lightly."

He said he was not told the specific wording of the letter to the Kremlin or what, if any, response there was from Brezhnev.

Disclosure of the Ford-Brezhnev letter marks the first confirmation that the embassy radiation question has been considered serious enough to require personal attention at the highest level of U.S.-Soviet relations.

An aide to Dole who was present during the senator's closed-door briefing with Sonnenfeldt told the Ford letter to Brezhnev evidently had been sent in December 1975 or January of this year.

The aide, Claude Alexander, said Sonnenfeldt explained that Ford "had written a personal letter to Brezhnev to make a personal appeal that these (U.S. embassy personnel being irradiated in Moscow) are our employees — in effect, 'What the hell are you trying to do?'"

According to a classified State department document made available to The Associated Press, U.S. concern over the Soviet microwaves — first detected in the early 1960s — increased in October 1975 when the radiation began focusing on the embassy from two different directions.

From October through January, the document said, the United States was "making representations" to the Soviet government while preparing to install protective screens on the building's windows. Embassy employees were finally briefed about the radiation in early February.

The Sonnenfeldt briefing and the White House spokesman's comments left unclear whether Ford's initial letter to Brezhnev was followed more recently by further high-level exchanges.

The State Department has denied that any U.S. concessions were made in return for reducing the radiation by the Soviets. "There is no question of a concession," spokesman Robert Funseth told reporters earlier this month.

Knowable U.S. sources say the searchlight-like Soviet microwave beams are intended to foil American electronic snooping devices on the roof of the 10-story embassy.

Over the 15-year history of the radiation problem — while its existence was a tightly held secret — the issue reportedly was raised by staff officials during the 1967 Glassboro summit meeting between President Lyndon B. Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

During recent months, the State Department has said the microwave situation figured in discussions between Kissinger and Anatoly Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador to Washington.

Funseth confirmed at a press briefing July 7 that the Soviets have "greatly reduced" the radiation.

But he added that "frankly, we regret that the Soviets have failed to turn off the transmissions completely, thereby, in our judgment, demonstrating a lack of concern for the living and working conditions of our people in Moscow."

Radio Car Patrols Cut

New York — A decline in radio car patrols in New York City — which the Police Department has said is its principal aid against crime — has followed budget and personnel cuts. Police records show that there was an 8% reduction last spring in the number of radio cars patrolling the streets compared with the spring of 1975. "There has positively been a loss in our capacity to fight crime," James F. Hannon, the department's chief of operations, said.

Detroit still has most of its historic ethnic diversity, but blacks dominate. In numbers, depending on whose estimate is accepted, they make up 52 to 60% of the Detroit population. Finance and industry are still white-controlled, but blacks have assumed much of the city's political leadership.

atmosphere of nitrogen, one of the ingredients for life as we know it, he said.

Martin said he had all but written off the seismology experiment.

"We sent two new commands to the seismometer," Martin said of the device that was to have measured "marsquakes" and probe the insides of the Red Planet. "But frankly, I don't hold out much hope for success."

New closeup pictures of the Chryse Plain on Mars revealed that a tiny lock pin lying on the Martian dust. That meant the pin, believed to have caused the jamming of the soil sampler's arm, had fallen away as planned.

Scientists said that on Wednesday the telescoping arm will be ordered out of its casing and onto the Martian surface, where its clawlike hand will scoop up a bit of Mars and drop it into miniature laboratories to be analyzed for signs of life.

After last week after the problem cropped up, scientists discovered through a mockup of the lander at the JPL that by extending the arm a bit the problem pin would drop free. That's what happened Sunday on Mars, scientists said.

But Martin, an aeronautical engineer, said he wasn't so sure. "I could see the 'B' very well, but I guess I've got to accept the scientific word for it," he said. "If I were a newsman I would wonder how a shadow could reach all the way around."

He said he was somewhat hesitant to rule out possibilities.

More Busnappers May Be Sought

Chowchilla, Calif. (AP) — With one young man in custody and two others being sought, authorities reported Sunday that they are investigating evidence that two more persons may have been involved in the Chowchilla school bus hijacking.

"There has been some talk of a fourth and fifth person being involved, but we haven't gotten far enough into the investigation to be sure," a law enforcement source told The Associated Press.

The source said the identities of the two new "possible suspects" were not certain.

The Oakland Tribune reported that a source close to the investigation said there is "a possibility that an older male was involved in the kidnaping, and there are some good leads to back it up."

The original descriptions listed a 50-year-old man, six feet or taller, with grey hair and an eagle tattoo on his right arm; a 45-year-old man, about 5-foot-6, with a chipped front tooth and sideburns; and a man in his mid 20s, 5-foot-7, with blue eyes, brown hair, moustache, goatee and perhaps a French accent.

Investigators said some of the apparent discrepancies in the original descriptions can be explained, but they declined to offer an explanation.

After meeting with Richard Schoenfeld for two hours Saturday, his lawyer told reporters, "My client shows signs of being suicidal."

"He also fears that his brother ... also might commit suicide," attorney William Gagen said.

He described his client as "bewildered and frightened. He is really a nervous baby-faced boy."

Gagen said jailers at Alameda County jail have agreed to move Schoenfeld from his isolation cell to a hospital cell where he can be easily observed.

Noting that emotions are running high in Madera County where the kidnaping occurred, Gagen said he and his partner, Edward Merrill, "will make every effort to arrange for a preliminary hearing to be heard in Alameda County — not Chowchilla, where we fear for Rick's safety."

The lawyer said the venue change will be sought at Schoenfeld's arraignment Thursday in Madera County. Authorities say he will face 43 counts, 27 of kidnaping for ransom and 16 counts of robbery, stemming from clothing and other personal items taken from the victims.

Child's Abduction Caused His Death

TISHOMINGO, Okla. (AP) — It is a drama acted out many times a year across the nation: estranged parents battling for the custody of their children. Steve and Jean Cain were such parents.

Three-year-old Cody was the focus of their tug-of-war.

Now father and son are dead.

The mother is hospitalized in shock.

Three of the father's friends are charged with second-degree murder, and both families are ripped by heartbreak.

Even in death, the feud lives on. Steve's relatives will be barred from Cody's funeral.

As in other custody battles, all legal remedies exhausted, the father had attempted an abduction. It's not an uncommon practice, lawyers even have a name for it: "self-help."

Cain, described by his lawyer as a "very mild-mannered young man," traveled from New Mexico to Tishomingo to get the child, accompanied by three friends he had known throughout his school years.

Their abduction attempt was well-planned: one of the four knocked at Mrs. Cain's door asking to use the telephone about 7:30 p.m. Friday. When he was let in, Cody was grabbed and the four fled in separate cars.

But they had not reckoned on the hot pursuit by the mother and her uncle, and certainly not on the wreck which threw the 3-year-old boy out of the car, slamming him against some rocks.

When his son was abducted, Jean Cain set out in hot pursuit

Ford Said To Have Protested Soviet Radiation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford sent a personal appeal to Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev urging that the Soviets curtail their microwave bombardment of the U.S. embassy in Moscow, according to Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Dole said he was told of the President's letter to Brezhnev during a closed-door briefing on the Moscow radiation problem by Helmut Sonnenfeldt, one of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's closest associates.

Following the Ford letter and U.S. diplomatic efforts to protest over the radiation, as well as an embassy staff meeting that led to widespread publicity, the Soviets reduced the microwave power levels. However, they have refused to cease the bombardment completely.

A White House spokesman, John Carlson, said there have been U.S.-Soviet contacts on the radiation issue at various levels and "there has been communication — correspondence — between the President and Brezhnev." He declined to give any further details.

The radiation problem has caused concern among current and former American personnel at the Moscow embassy that long-term exposure to the low-level microwaves might result in adverse health or behavioral effects.

Dole, who had voiced criticism over U.S. handling of the microwaves affair, said in an interview that Sonnenfeldt apparently mentioned the Ford letter — dispatched about seven months ago — to impress upon the senator that "we weren't taking this lightly."

He said he was not told the specific wording of the letter to the Kremlin or what, if any, response there was from Brezhnev.

Disclosure of the Ford-Brezhnev letter marks the first confirmation that the embassy radiation question has been considered serious enough to require personal attention at the highest level of U.S.-Soviet relations.

An aide to Dole who was present during the senator's closed-door briefing with Sonnenfeldt said the Ford letter to Brezhnev evidently had been sent in December 1975 or January of this year.

The aide, Claude Alexander, said Sonnenfeldt explained that Ford "had written a personal letter to Brezhnev to make a personal appeal that these (U.S. embassy personnel being irradiated in Moscow) are our employees — in effect, 'What the hell are you trying to do?'

According to a classified State department document made available to The Associated Press, U.S. concern over the Soviet microwaves — first detected in the early 1960s — increased in October 1975 when the radiation began focusing on the embassy from two different directions.

From October through January, the document said, the United States was "making representations" to the Soviet government while preparing to install protective screens on the building's windows. Embassy employees were finally briefed about the radiation in early February.

The Sonnenfeldt briefing and the White House spokesman's comments left unclear whether Ford's initial letter to Brezhnev was followed more recently by further high-level exchanges.

The State Department has denied that any U.S. concessions were made in return for reducing the radiation by the Soviets. "There is no question of a concession," spokesman Robert Funseth told reporters earlier this month.

Knowledgeable U.S. sources say the searchlight-like Soviet microwave beams are intended to foil American electronic snooping devices on the roof of the 10-story embassy.

Over the 15-year history of the radiation problem — while its existence was a tightly held secret — the issue reportedly was raised by staff officials during the 1967 Glassboro summit meeting between President Lyndon B. Johnson and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

During recent months, the State Department has said the microwave situation figured in discussions between Kissinger and Anatoly Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador to Washington.

Funseth confirmed at a press briefing July 7 that the Soviets have "greatly reduced" the radiation.

But he added that "frankly, we regret that the Soviets have failed to turn off the transmissions completely, thereby, in our judgment, demonstrating a lack of concern for the living and working conditions of our people in Moscow."

But they had not reckoned on the hot pursuit by the mother and her uncle, and certainly not on the wreck which threw the 3-year-old boy out of the car, slamming him against some rocks.

When her son was abducted, Jean Cain set out in hot pursuit in a car, while her uncle, Clay Martin joined the chase in a pickup truck. The highway patrol said Steve Cain apparently swerved when Martin tried to pull up beside him. The pickup ran into the rear of the car carrying Cain and his son. The car hit an embankment and overturned three times.

Cody Cain died at the scene. His father, fatally injured, died Saturday night.

The father's three friends were charged with second-degree murder. Authorities said the three were with Cain when the boy was abducted, but attempts to get an official explanation of the murder charges were unsuccessful.

No charges were filed against Martin.

Cody will be buried in Tishomingo on Tuesday. On the same day, the body of 25-year-old Steve Cain will be sent back to the ranch country around Truth or Consequences, N.M., for burial.

As in most child custody cases, the stories of "why" are contradictory.

Cain's family says he only wanted to give the boy the best life possible, raising him in the family ranching tradition.

More immediately, Cain's sister wanted Cody to be ring-bearer in her upcoming wedding.

Mrs. Cain's brother, Clay, said she wanted to protect her son from what she thought were bad influences. She believed that her former husband kept the boy up too late at night and took him to bars.

GOP Congressman Faces Traffic Charges

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Frank Horton faces charges of reckless driving, driving while intoxicated and speeding after what State Police said was a six-mile auto chase at speeds up to 105 miles an hour.

Under questioning from reporters at a campaign appearance near here Saturday night, Horton said that he had been arrested July 18.

He said the episode had been "personally upsetting, but I didn't do anything wrong as far as my constituency is concerned."

State Police in Buffalo confirmed that Horton had been arrested in the early morning hours on the New York State Thruway near Batavia. They said troopers chased the congressman after he was clocked by radar at 78 m.p.h.

"I'm a private citizen and I have a private life. I'm also a public citizen and I have a public life. What's involved here is my private life," Horton said.

"I'm just like anyone else," he said. "I'm human. I did something wrong. I had a few drinks and I was speeding and I'm sorry about it."

Horton, 56, a Republican, has been a member of Congress for 14 years and is running reelection. He represents the 34th Congressional District, including eastern Monroe County and all of Wayne County.

At the time of the arrest, he said he was returning from dinner with two women. Horton, who is married, identified one woman as "a personal friend," Nancy Flood, a divorcee from suburban Greece, N.Y. He said he did not remember the name of the other woman.

He was held by police for two hours and given a breath analysis test before being charged.

"They put me in the back of the police car and treated me as if I was a common criminal," Horton said. "They wouldn't let me get out of the police car to go get my jacket or folder. Mrs. Flood had to bring them to me."

"I told them my name. They didn't ask, but I thought they should know who I was," he said.

Horton has been ordered to appear in the Town of Stafford court on Aug. 10.

All But 1 Of Howe's Campaign Staff Quits

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — All but one of Rep. Allan T. Howe's paid campaign staffers resigned during the weekend following the congressman's misdemeanor conviction for soliciting sex acts for pay.

Even in the face of the resignations and a lack of support from party leaders, Howe said Sunday that he would stay in the race. He said the resignations may require "some reorganization in the staff."

The freshman Democrat remained with his family at Snowbird Ski resort, where he said he planned meetings with his staff before returning to Washington, probably early in the week.

Howe has said he would ask the district court for an early trial date for his appeal. Utah law provides for an entirely new trial when a city court conviction is appealed.

Rouliac Garn, the 48-year-old congressman's campaign financial director, and Colby Smith, research coordinator, resigned Saturday during what the financial director termed a "difficult meeting" with Howe and Tim Allen, his campaign manager.

Mrs. Judy Barrett, campaign office manager, resigned Friday "because of some family problems." She said Saturday "it would be best" if Howe withdrew from the 2nd District race.

"It certainly was not a malicious action on my part," Smith said of his decision to resign. "I don't intend to judge

At the time of the arrest, he said he was returning from dinner with two women. Horton, who is married, identified one woman as "a personal friend," Nancy Flood, a divorcee from suburban Greece, N.Y. He said he did not remember the name of the other woman.

He was held by police for two hours and given a breath analysis test before being charged.

"They put me in the back of the police car and treated me as if I was a common criminal," Horton said. "They wouldn't let me get out of the police car to go get my jacket or folder. Mrs. Flood had to bring them to me."

"I told them my name. They didn't ask, but I thought they should know who I was," he said.

Horton has been ordered to appear in the Town of Stafford court on Aug. 10.

All But 1 Of Howe's Campaign Staff Quits

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — All but one of Rep. Allan T. Howe's paid campaign staffers resigned during the weekend following the congressman's misdemeanor conviction for soliciting sex acts for pay.

Even in the face of the resignations and a lack of support from party leaders, Howe said Sunday that he would stay in the race. He said the resignations may require "some reorganization in the staff."

The freshman Democrat remained with his family at Snowbird Ski resort, where he said he planned meetings with his staff before returning to Washington, probably early in the week.

Howe has said he would ask the district court for an early trial date for his appeal. Utah law provides for an entirely new trial when a city court conviction is appealed.

Rouhac Garn, the 48-year-old congressman's campaign financial director, and Colby Smith, research coordinator, resigned Saturday during what the financial director termed a "difficult meeting" with Howe and Tim Allen, his campaign manager.

Mrs. Judy Barrett, campaign office manager, resigned Friday "because of some family problems." She said Saturday "it would be best" if Howe withdrew from the 2nd District race.

"It certainly was not a malicious action on my part," Smith said of his decision to resign. "I don't intend to judge

A Thousand Deaths

How would you like to have your life bounced back and forth like a tennis ball, cut short one moment and given more time the next? That is the way it is with the hundreds of prison inmates throughout the country now awaiting execution for capital crimes.

Early this month, the U.S. Supreme Court rendered a decision that seemed to clear the way for the execution of most if not all of these convicts. Now before the month is out, one of the high court justices has issued a stay order on that earlier decision, pending its review in the fall by the entire court.

Still earlier, the high court had given a new lease on life to the death row occupants when it classified a certain death sentence as cruel and unusual punishment and, therefore, unconstitutional. So in the course of a few months, the high court has ruled against the death penalty, for the death penalty and now, again, against it.

At least, that has been the practical results of its actions, even though it is a faulty legal assessment of what has happened. Without any doubt, the court has raised the hopes of condemned men, dashed them and now raised them again.

Rising Health Care Costs

On and on goes the battle over what, if anything, needs to be done and can be done about rising health care costs. A prominent group of Omaha health care and business representatives has called for a moratorium on new hospital bed expansion there, in the wake of a proposed 280-bed expansion by two hospitals in the city.

One of the group estimated that there now are from 407 to 1,029 excess beds in Omaha, depending upon the formula used for such a determination.

In hearings last week, the Presidential Council on Wage and Price Stability was told that the health care system's pursuit of sophisticated medical technology, regardless of need, was contributing heavily to rising health care costs.

We very much doubt that any widespread agreement could be found in the health care system and related agencies and organizations on the causes of rising health care costs and what might or needs to be done about it. For every critic of the system, there are multitudes of voices in defense.

We cannot escape the opinion, however, that the system as a whole has done a poor job of cost control. Medicine in

If that is not cruel and unusual punishment, we don't know what it is. It is not out of any sympathy for the condemned men that we speak nor in disregard for the victims of the crimes of these men. We simply believe that capital punishment is an act of inhumanity in which mankind should not be participating.

We clearly recognize that a lot of people favor capital punishment, perhaps a majority. But not even a majority is always right.

It may still be generations away, but the time will come when our use of capital punishment is looked back upon as a repugnant and unenlightened element of our society. There will be a time in the future when others will study our society and find it incomprehensible that, in view of an often heightened human sensitivity, we continued to practice capital punishment.

It is probably true that in times past, the country's use of capital punishment was more humane than it now is. In that past, such a sentence at least was carried out rather swiftly, with the victim not left sitting in a cell and wondering day to day what his ultimate fate would be.

Hirschfeld is reported to be spending large chunks of his own money to get on the ballot by the petition route.

As for Sen. Buckley who won the endorsement of the Republican Party, with even Vice President Nelson Rockefeller wishing him well, he can only hope that these five contenders will kill each other off in September leaving him with a clear edge for re-election in November.

But the big question is what the Republicans will do at their convention in Kansas City next month. If Ronald Reagan should win the presidential nomination or even if he should be chosen by President Ford for the No. 2 spot, Buckley's position would be difficult if not impossible.

He could not repudiate Reagan, the leader of the conservatives, although he would know full well that the Reagan name is anathema to liberal-to-moderate voters in this state.

In that event a Jimmy Carter sweep could overwhelm the only member of the Senate elected on a Conservative ticket. While he has not had exactly a distinguished record in the Senate, he is nevertheless a symbol supposedly of what Reagan is appealing for.

It is a good show and it may even generate some humor as an offset to the solemn convention that the party held in Madison Square Garden. Certainly Moynihan can be counted on for good theater even though it may be a far cry from traditional politics.

Auld Lang Syne?

WASHINGTON — The time is coming in Reagan's campaign when Guy Lombardo will look up at the clock and play "Auld Lang Syne." This is not just because the Californian appears to have lost his chance for nomination at the rapidly approaching Republican Convention, but because an era is ending, and with it any national prospects for Reagan-vintage conservatism.

A simple yardstick will suffice. Late this winter, Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter were virtually neck and neck in Gallup polls. Now Reagan trails 64 to 28%.

Where Reagan went wrong, I believe, was in treating the 1975-76 period as an opportunity for the resurgence of traditional conservatism — the mix of states' rights, saber-rattling, strong anti-Communism, staunch free market economics, business deregulation, and reduced-government theory popular among so-called Conservative Movement intellectuals, most of whom are better at carrying college debates than carrying precincts.

Granted that the former California governor did have some other themes. He rightly pitched against Washington (but undercut his own intellectual position with a widely ridiculed plan to return $90 billion worth of functions to the states). And he took solid stands against busing and abortion. But somehow, and it's difficult to explain precisely why, all of these seemed to be based on abstract doctrines of old-style conservatism rather than any new fusion of traditional conservative values with activist, populist concern for the neighborhoods and livelihoods of Middle America.

Back in 1975, when this columnist still had some hopes for Gov. Reagan, these were based on Reagan's having enough sense to see that the only conservative opportunity lay in getting together with George Wallace and his supporters and developing a new cultural and economic empathy with blue-collar America.

But as 1975 lengthened into 1976, Ronald Reagan's political fortunes took a turn for the worse.

MARQUIS CHILDS

NEW YORK — After the feast of love, harmony and sweet good will that the Democrats put on, it is almost a relief to find the old politics of fang and claw still at work.

Fittingly it is here in New York that the mayhem so familiar in past skirmishes is on the boards.

Four candidates are fighting for the Democratic nomination for a Senate seat and the privilege of running against Sen. James Buckley, a Republican and a conservative.

This disparate and hostile four makes up a kind of political aviary ready at a moment's notice to scratch out a rival's eyes.

The showiest of the lot, a peacock of sorts, is Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who created a national reputation for himself as delegate to the United Nations when he came to the defense of Israel with a bravura attack on the Third World nations.

Having in theory at least returned to his professorship at Harvard when he left the U.N., Moynihan waited until it was certain that Jimmy Carter would be the Democratic nominee and would presumably unite the party before he announced for the Senate.

The conventional wisdom is that because of his U.N. performance, the massive Jewish vote in this city will be with him with no more ado. By leading the assault on the Third World resolution equating Zionism with racism, Moynihan, who had faithfully served President Nixon in the White House, won Jewish voters to the extent that when he undertakes a campaign stroll, he is so overwhelmed by admirers as to make progress all but impossible.

But on one previous occasion Moynihan showed himself to be a poor if an indifferent campaigner. With Rep. Bella Abzug as a rival he cannot take the Jewish vote for granted. O'Dwyer was the Democratic candidate for the Senate that year and it was not until the last day or two of the campaign that Hirschfeld is reported to be spending large chunks of his own money to get on the ballot by the petition route.

As for Sen. Buckley who won the endorsement of the Republican Party, with even Vice President Nelson Rockefeller wishing him well, he can only hope that these five contenders will kill each other off in September leaving him with a clear edge for re-election in November.

But the big question is what the Republicans will do at their convention in Kansas City next month. If Ronald Reagan should win the presidential nomination or even if he should be chosen by President Ford for the No. 2 spot, Buckley's position would be difficult if not impossible.

He could not repudiate Reagan, the leader of the conservatives, although he would know full well that the Reagan name is anathema to liberal-to-moderate voters in this state.

In that event a Jimmy Carter sweep could overwhelm the only member of the Senate elected on a Conservative ticket. While he has not had exactly a distinguished record in the Senate, he is nevertheless a symbol supposedly of what Reagan is appealing for.

It is a good show and it may even generate some humor as an offset to the solemn convention that the party held in Madison Square Garden. Certainly Moynihan can be counted on for good theater even though it may be a far cry from traditional politics.

Rain Too Much For Bank Gang

EDITOR'S NOTE — A heavy, unseasonable rain fell on Nice in the French Riviera on Sunday, July 18, and no one noticed a vehicle coming out of a water drainage tunnel. The group inside had just staged the bank robbery of the century. Here is a reconstruction of how it was done.

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

NICE, France (AP) — Bank Manager Jacques Guenet came to work early that Monday morning. The tourist season was at its height in this capital of the French Riviera, and Monday is always a busy day.

Guenet and his staff process scores of canvas bags filled with the weekend receipts of stores, hotels and restaurants.

It was 8:15 a.m., July 19, well before opening time, when the telephone rang in Guenet's office. "The vault door is jammed again," a bank official reported. The 12-inch-thick steel door is more than 53 years old and its complex locking mechanism had jammed several times in the past. Guenet was not unduly alarmed.

An hour later, when all efforts to release the mechanism had failed, Guenet reluctantly gave orders to call in a firm of mechanics to break into the vault. Several customers who had safe deposit boxes were waiting in the high-ceilinged main office.

At precisely the same time, 570 feet south of Guenet's office on Avenue Jean Medecin, an employee of the municipal water service was also having trouble with a steel door.

Regularly every Monday morning, Andre Dumont walks down the steps to the first level of the 753-car, underground parking garage on Place Massena and unlocks the heavy brown-painted door marked "No Exit" in big white letters. Behind the door, another flight of concrete steps leads down to the drainage system that carries rainwater from all over the city into the Paillon River. An automatic device measures the water level, and the readings are collected every Monday morning.

Door Lock Jammed

On that day, the lock on the door was jammed. The water service called a locksmith to open the door. Many times before, pranksters had jammed the lock with chewing gum or small pebbles from the nearby beach.

Neither the bank officials nor the water men knew about each other's problems. Neither knew they were about to stumble on the bank robbery of the century — and that the doors had been purposely jammed to give the thieves a 24-hour start in their getaway.

With them they took gold, French francs and foreign currency conservatively estimated at $10 million, but possibly as much as $14 million.

Nice, with nearly a half million inhabitants and the fifth largest city of France, is at the heart of Europe's millionaire's playground, an important tourist and commercial center.

Between Guenet's bank and the Place Massena, a department store occupies an entire city block. It remains open all day on Saturday, its busiest day of the week. The Saturday receipts, sometimes exceeding $100,000, are carried across the street at the end of the day to Guenet's bank, the Riviera head office of the Societe Generale. The bank is closed Saturday, so the money is dropped down a steel chute directly into the vault, 20 feet below street level. The chute has complex protective devices and is regarded as burglar-proof.

Millions Go Down Chute

On Saturday, July 17, about 70 firms in and around Nice dropped more than five million francs ($1.05 million) down that chute — into the hands of thieves operating with the precision of a moon landing.

Last month, Guenet decided that too few of the safe deposit boxes had been rented, so he had a local publicity firm distribute 5,000 pamphlets bearing the slogan: "Go on vacation without worry. Put your precious possessions in a safe deposit of the Societe Generale."

The pamphlet showed a picture of a villa ransacked by burglars.

The mechanics at the bank finally broke through the jammed door into the vault at 2:45 p.m. Monday after more than five hours of work. The door had been welded shut from the inside by an expert. The floor of the underground room was littered with jewelry, stock certificates and private papers.

A smell of damp caverns came from a large hole behind one of the safes. The safe itself had been wrenched from the wall with a hydraulic jack. Four acetylene torches of a highly perfected type lay among the treasures. Eight or nine gas cylinders and a mass of other sophisticated equipment were piled up against one wall. The bank's safes and more than 300 safe deposit boxes were neatly cut open.

The police estimated later that at least seven men worked at the "operational level" in the bank from Friday evening until early Sunday afternoon, when an unseasonal rainstorm threatened to cut off their getaway route through the drainage tunnels, probably forcing them to flee much earlier than they had planned.

Meals With Leisure And Relish

In the vault they left behind a camp cooking stove, cooking utensils, plates and empty wine bottles. They evidently took their meals with leisure and relish, one investigator said, and smoked expensive cigarettes afterward.

On the walls of the vault, they pinned up pornographic photographs they found in one of the safe deposit boxes.

Priceless antique silver bowls were used as chamberpots.

And before leaving they painted on one wall the pacifist symbol of an upside-down letter Y in a circle, with the words, "Without arms, without violence and without hatred."

The vault's ventilation shaft was carefully sealed to prevent noise or smoke that could attract the night watchman in the bank above. An electric air pump was attached to a plastic tube leading to the drainage system and provided the air needed during the operation.

A white electric cable led for 460 yards through the sewers to a neon light above the concrete staircase used by the water service men. The cable was carefully nailed to the wall and cemented in place, showing the men prepared their electricity supply weeks before.

Once the cable was connected, they jammed the door leading to the garage. This was one of the small details that led Jacques Besson, head of the crime squad of Nice police, to conclude that the gang originally planned to stay in the vault until early Monday morning.

Rain Comes At Bad Time

"It's possible that without the heavy rain that fell all day on Sunday they would have had time to break open hundreds more safe deposit boxes and increase their haul by millions," Besson said.

The rain was so heavy that at around 5 p.m. — after the burglars left — there was only six inches of space at some points between the water level and the brick-lined sewer ceiling.

Yet it was the drainage system leading to the Paillon River that made the coup possible.

For more than a mile the Paillon ran beneath the city's main square, Place Massena, and the three-acre exhibition hall, the city's largest building.

Immediately behind the exhibition hall, the Paillon flows under seven concrete arches into a black tunnel. A lone strip of corrugated iron blocks an access road leading from the street level to the river bed. Anyone wanting to risk his tires and springs on the rough surface can lift the barrier and drive into the tunnel.

Officials Mild-Mannered In Face Of Budget Chops

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

As county departmental budgets were put on the chopping block this week, screams from department heads have been few and usually low key.

Most departments saw their requests for new employees and new equipment eliminated and travel budgets reduced drastically as the three county commissioners tried to match departmental needs and demands with a very tight financial situation.

Several department heads said that cuts — particularly in new personnel — would hurt, but were not unreasonable.

"We understand that they (commissioners) have a tough job this year," said LeRoy Irie, deputy county clerk.

"I support them. I think they are doing a good job," said Clerk of the District Court Sandra Hahn, whose $258,014 request was trimmed by about $5,000. Even County Engineer Marv Nuernberger, who last year battled loudly against cuts made in his budget, toned down his campaign this year. He plans to fight for more money, but the rhetoric so far this summer has been mild.

And Sheriff Merle Karnopp, whose more-than-$1.2 million budget request was chopped by more than $100,000 this week, said, "I'll live with it."

The loudest screams came, predictably, from County Assessor Fritz Meyer. He lost almost $54,000 from his $488,000 request.

"Commissioners have mismanaged revenue-sharing money, have mismanaged their own office. And the rest of the elected officials have to suffer their mismanagement," said Meyer.

He suggested that the almost

$1 million in annual revenue-sharing funds be put into county department operation rather than in "giveaway" programs.

The cut in the assessor's budget will mean that the property assessment revaluation commissioners were counting on to relieve the financial pressure in 1977-78 will not be finished, Meyer said.

Privately other elected officials were a little unhappy with Meyer himself, for the property value update will help not only the commissioners, but every county department. When values go up the county will have more tax money to work with and departments may get more of what they ask for in budgets.

"I think Meyer could get the job done if he wanted to. Meyer is hurting us just as much as he's hurting the commissioners," said one official, who asked not to be named.

Rain Comes At Bad Time

"It's possible that without the heavy rain that fell all day on Sunday they would have had time to break open hundreds more safe deposit boxes and increase their haul by millions," Besson said.

The rain was so heavy that at around 5 p.m. — after the burglars left — there was only six inches of space at some points between the water level and the brick-lined sewer ceiling.

Yet it was the drainage system leading to the Paillon River that made the coup possible.

For more than a mile the Paillon ran beneath the city's main square, Place Massena, and the three-acre exhibition hall, the city's largest building.

Immediately behind the exhibition hall, the Paillon flows under seven concrete arches into a black tunnel. A loose strip of corrugated iron blocks an access road leading from the street level to the river bed. Anyone wanting to risk his tires and springs on the rough surface can lift the barrier and drive into the tunnel.

Besson said the thieves must have made several trips in a sturdy vehicle for nearly a mile along the underground riverbed to bring in more than a ton of supplies and equipment. At the point where the sewer under Rue Chauvain reaches the river, they unloaded their equipment into inflatable rubber boats. These they hauled along the narrow sewer channels for three blocks and around two corners to a spot under Rue Gustave Deloye which they knew was level with the Societe Generale vault. The same rubber boats were used to haul the money and gold out.

Earth, Rock, Concrete, Steel

Twenty feet of hard packed earth and rocks, a thick wall of reinforced concrete and a steel panel lay between the sewer and the vault.

Besson said he was not sure how long the men spent tunnelling a two-by-two-foot passage going slightly upward from the sewer, carefully shored up with steel girders and lined with cement in places. One investigator said it was a job of several weeks, performed by experts skilled in mining techniques.

The earth dug out of the tunnel was packed into plastic bags which were neatly piled up in another part of the sewer system. The tunnel emerged into the vault at precisely the favorable spot for dislodging the heavy safe that still barred the way.

Besson is convinced the robbers knew the layout of the vault to the nearest centimeter.

Bank officials said the losses were fully covered by insurance.

All safe deposit holders with boxes in or near the wrecked part of the vault have been asked to file detailed inventories. Officials said no one has come forward so far to claim the pornographic photos.

Tax Questions Possible

The claims are accepted on trust, the officials said, as there is no way to prove how much money or other valuables were in a safe to which only the holder had access. However, anyone claiming to have lost an unusually large sum can expect questions from the tax authorities.

For this reason, in fact, some safe deposit holders may be tempted to underestimate rather than overestimate their losses.

Preliminary estimates placed the total loss at 50 million francs — more than $10 million. Marseilles Police Commissioner Ferdinand Matthieu, in overall charge of the case, said, "I am sure no one will ever know exactly how much was taken, but we consider our estimate to be on the conservative side."

No one saw the thieves' truck drive out of the tunnel behind the exhibition hall in the pouring rain Sunday afternoon. They were so leisurely about their getaway that they stopped to replace the corrugated iron barrier behind them.

Commissioner Matthieu told reporters: "We are trying to work on this case with the same thoroughness as our adversaries."

Said Besson: "For the moment we are completely in the dark. From the efficiency with which the coup was planned and carried out, it is to be supposed that the getaway was also well prepared."

Gang Contained Experts

Matthieu said the gang was obviously composed of top flight experts in such varied fields as engineering, geology, electricity, plumbing, masonry and logistics. Some of the men undoubtedly were veteran safebreakers, while others may have worked among a labor force of several hundred that spent two years building the four-level garage under Place Massena.

"Some of them may have been foreigners," Matthieu said, "but we think at least one of them must have been a native of Nice to have such detailed knowledge of the sewer system, and, above all, to realize the danger they all ran when it started to rain."

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Farm Editor

A fantastic book for anyone interested in photography, an excellent tool to teach people about the wide variety of things that make up American agriculture, and, hopefully, a document that will be of value to future historians.

It is the new yearbook of agriculture issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

USDA has issued a yearbook each year since 1884. Most have been crammed with statistical information and were rather dull reading.

This one is considerably different.

There are 316 black and white photos and 19 color prints that show virtually every aspect of U.S. food production at the farm level — from gardening to fish farming.

There are dozens of photos of farmers of all colors and their families.

"If someone had been able to put together a good book of photographs in 1776, showing colonial life as it really was, that book would be invaluable today. It would bring early America to life for us in a way words alone cannot do," says Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz in the book's introduction.

youngsters playing with toy versions of farm equipment and oldsters amusing themselves with old-time threshing equipment at an exhibition.

In addition to the beauty of the rural scenes, there is a lot of good farm data that might be of educational value in teaching non-farmers a bit about how food and fiber is produced.

A photo of three giant cotton pickers reminds readers that while such a machine will pick as much in an hour as 72 men, it also will require 100 acres of land capable of producing a bale of cotton an acre to make it worthwhile.

Family life on the farm is depicted in many scenes, ranging from a youngster running in a cornfield to a photo of work clothing hung in a mud room.

Farms range from a 10-acre field in Missouri to huge ranches in the west. Part-time farms and full-time farms are presented along with farmers from Alaska and Hawaii as well as throughout the other 48 states.

Nebraska is illustrated by several scenes, including a photo of Leroy Tillotson of Farnam putting an extension on his grain truck in preparation for harvest.

The joys of a good crop and the pain of hail damage to harvest-ready grain and fruit are there along with early morning

UNL Slates Open House

Mead — University of Nebraska-Lincoln animal scientists will open an open house to discuss current research, results and future plans Tuesday from 5 p.m.

The event will be held at the beef research unit south of Highway 63 at the NU Field Laboratory near Mead.

Dr. Paul Guyer, NU Extension livestock specialist, said those attending should assemble at the new feed mill. He said staff will be stationed at several locations, all but one within walking distance of the mill. Those interested in viewing the new unique individual self-feeding barn will be given a ride, he said.

West Germany had a good wheat crop, but dry weather has shaved million metric tons from their feed grain production.

India, which had excellent spring crops, is worrying about its winter crop of feed and feed

Weekly Grain Report

Farmers have to learn to watch the weather in the major crop producing areas around the world if they are to do an intelligent job of marketing crops.

The dry weather in France will cut that nation's crop from a normal 41.2 million metric tons to 30 million metric tons.

Total grain exports from France are expected to drop 50%. Wheat exports will drop from 8.5 million metric tons to 5.5 million metric tons. Barley exports will be cut in half and corn exports may vanish entirely.

Much of Australia is having dry weather, and in Brazil the frost problem has damaged some grain.

Changes in worldwide weather conditions change prices of grain at every Nebraska elevator.

Spreading sales of grain over several months can offer the chance to take advantage of price increases caused by these weather problems.

Wheat Shipping Behind

Wheat shipments in the new marketing year which began June 1 continue to run behind a year ago, according to the latest data on inspections of grain at export points.

The shipping season begins Sept. 1 for soybeans, Oct. 1 for corn and sorghum, and June 1 for small grains such as oats, rye, wheat and barley.

Be Smarter than the Average Bear

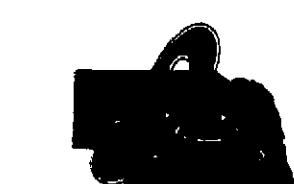

When it comes to energy conservation, a bear shows pretty good sense. He builds up fat and fur in the summer to last him all winter long. Then he hibernates during the winter so that he can save his precious energy.

You have a considerable edge on Mr. Bear. You don't have to hibernate to save energy. With modern heating and cooling technology, you can remain active all year long.

You should, however, be aware of the many ways that you have to conserve energy, so that the generations to come will have the same opportunities that you do.

Water Dropping At McConaughy

Ogallala (AP) — Unless the current dry spell ends, Lake McConaughy may drop to its lowest level in 12 to 15 years by summer's end.

Burwin Bean, resident engineer at Kingsley Dam for the Central Nebraska Public Power and Irrigation District, said the lake already is 6.6 feet lower than at this time last year with over 40 days of irrigation use ahead.

He said the lake was dropping about three-tenths of a foot a day.

Relieves Tormenting Rectal Pain And Itch, Helps Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues

... Due to inflammation. Gives prompt, temporary relief from such burning itch and pain in many cases.

The burning itch and pain caused by infection and inflammation in hemorrhoidal tissues can cause much suffering. But there is an exclusive formulation that in many cases gives prompt relief for hours from this itch and pain so that the sufferer is more comfortable again. It also actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation and infection.

Tests by doctors on hundreds of patients in New York City, Washington, D.C. and at a Midwest Medical Center reported that the product is effective in relieving rectal pain and itch and shrinking hemorrhoidal tissues.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Farm Editor

A fantastic book for anyone interested in photography, an excellent tool to teach people about the wide variety of things that make up American agriculture, and, hopefully, a document that will be of value to future historians.

It is the new yearbook of agriculture issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

USDA has issued a yearbook each year since 1894. Most have been crammed with statistical information and were rather dull reading.

This one is considerably different.

There are 316 black and white photos and 19 color prints that show virtually every aspect of U.S. food production at the farm level — from gardening to fish farming.

There are dozens of photos of farmers of all colors and their families.

"If someone had been able to put together a good book of photographs in 1776, showing colonial life as it really was, that book would be invaluable today. It would bring early America to life for us in a way words alone cannot do," says Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz in the book's introduction.

youngsters playing with toy versions of farm equipment and oldsters amusing themselves with old-time threshing equipment an exhibition.

In addition to the beauty of the rural scenes, there is a lot of good farm data that might be of educational value in teaching non-farmers a bit about how food and fiber is produced.

A photo of three giant cotton pickers reminds readers that while such a machine will pick as much in an hour as 72 men, it also will require 100 acres of land capable of producing a bale of cotton an acre to make it worthwhile.

Family life on the farm is depicted in many scenes, ranging from a youngster running in a cornfield to a photo of work clothing hung in a mud room.

Farms range from a 10-acre cornfield in Missouri to huge ranches in the west. Part-time farms and full-time farms are presented along with farmers from Alaska and Hawaii as well as throughout the other 48 states.

Nebraska is illustrated by several scenes, including a photo of Leroy Tillotson of Farnam putting an extension on his grain truck in preparation for harvest.

The joys of a good crop and the pain of hail damage to harvest-ready grain and fruit are there along with early morning

California raisins are making an important contribution to this nation's ability to pay its bills overseas. Some 300 metric tons of raisins will be used in the national school lunch program in Japan this year.

We tend to think of wheat, feed grain and soybeans as our farm exports, but we also sell a lot of other things that play a role in our farm income as a nation.

Things like pork kidneys, beef liver, hides, skins, fruits, canned vegetables, turkeys, poultry, nuts and even live cattle play an important role in our worldwide income.

Science may have found a way to rid the nation of the Japanese beetle without chemical sprays, but it is going to take a lot of money.

Someone has devised a chemical odor that attracts the male beetle better than a pen of females. If enough traps can be baited with the stuff and operated over a few years the green Japanese beetle ought to disappear.

This critter eats up some $250 million worth of plants of at least 275 different species each year.

Good riddance to a bad bug. I suppose some group that dearly loves the bug will surface, creating a storm of protest and eventually causing a lawsuit to prevent the trapping of the beetle, but it sure sounds like a good idea.

We are seeing a lot of big-time purebred cattle companies holding dispersal sales, possibly because the prices of top quality breeding cattle have improved a little in recent months.

There doesn't seem to be any general panic in the cattle country yet, but there are a lot of reasons to be worried about your ability to stay in business.

Current high feed prices coupled with lower fat cattle prices are hurting everyone in the livestock business.

As land prices go up, and with a temporary increase in the price of the registered cattle at sales, the temptation to sell is overwhelming to those who don't like the color of red ink in their books.

On the positive side is the fact that family-owned ranches and feedlots are doing a better job of controlling costs than the big public firms.

The cost factors of unions, OSHA rules, EPA rules and the general harassment of big farm business may keep the small operator around for many years provided he has a place to market his livestock and grains.

Without that market the ballgame is over.

The second year of the Farmers Market in Lincoln seems to be a success. It has been well promoted, producers are learning how to present their product to the public and the homemaker who can't garden is able to provide a tasty treat for her family that just isn't obtainable in any grocery store.

Omaha has two farmers markets and nearly every large city in the nation is working on a similar arrangement.

We really ought to have a permanent site that would operate year-round with stalls equipped with scales, a cash register and regular inspections of the product by the Department of Agriculture. The farmers market is free enterprise at its best.

World grain markets are responding to worldwide weather conditions. This is particularly apparent in wheat and feed grain prices.

Dry weather in France really hurt its feed grain crop, but the small grains apparently were almost ready to harvest before the drought got bad.

Australia has had a bit of rain, improving its chances of getting winter wheat into the ground.

There are also stories about poor crops in mainland China, which are possible because it has cancelled soybean export sales and is buying some soybeans.

It may be in the market for a supply of wheat or feed grain, but nobody seems to know if it will buy anything.

Speculators who guess right may be quite wealthy, those who don't will be flat broke.

Don't get too happy about the ban on Occupational, Safety and Health Administration activity on small farms. It will only last a single year unless Congress decides to extend it.

It is a small victory at best. Government regulators will use the breathing spell to call for funds for a greater staff so when they return to the farm it will be with a larger force of investigators.

Government agencies have a nasty way of growing around efforts to limit their activities. A temporary limit on their activities will hardly be noticed.

Besides his widow, survivors include a son, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Kunz of Palmyra, and a sister.

Chain-Letter Scheme Hits Town

By JIM CAMDEN

Star Staff Writer

A chain-letter scheme that looks like a sure-fire way to make more than $38,000 without risking a cent has hit Lincoln. But, like all get-rich schemes, it's not all that it's cracked up to be.

First and foremost, it's illegal. The scheme, which involves sending $25 U.S. savings bonds as "gifts" to a person whose name is at the top of a list, is a violation of the federal mail fraud statutes, said postal inspector Paul Smith.

The Federal Reserve Board and the U.S. Treasury Department have notified local banks to refuse to sell savings bonds to persons who might be involved in the scheme.

Federal officials stationed in Lincoln are aware of the scheme and say they will prosecute if they receive complaints from persons who lose money in the scheme.

The scheme works this way:

A person, John Doe, buys a "kit" containing a new $25 U.S. savings bond, a list of 10 names and some instructions for $37.50. He mails the enclosed bond to, say, Bill Jones, whose name is at the top of the list. The bond is already made out to Jones.

Then Doe buys two more $25 bonds from a bank at a cost of $18.75 each. He has the bonds put in the name of the No. 2 person on his list, Mary Smith. Then he composes two new lists, with Mrs. Smith's name on top and his name at the bottom. He puts the new lists, copies of the instructions and the bonds he bought into two new kits. Then he sells his kits to two other persons for $37.50 apiece.

Doe spends $75, but gets that amount back when he sells the two kits. The rationale that perpetuates the scheme is that even if the buyer doesn't make it to the top of the list, he at least isn't out any money. And if he does make it to the top of the list, he will receive more than $38,000 in bonds from the 2,046 persons who will have his name atop their lists when he goes from the No. 10 spot to the No. 1 spot.

However, as the scheme fails to point out, when Doe buys his kit, there are at least 2,046 other persons whose name is also No. 10. (As the scheme progresses the participants increase exponentially). So, in order to get Doe, and everyone else in a similar position to the top, the scheme takes 2,097,150 persons.

And, if the scheme progresses much farther, it will take more people than the population of the world to keep the pyramid from collapsing.

Because the scheme is built on such a pyramid and cannot continue, it is fraud. And because the mail is used to perpetuate the scheme by sending the bonds to the person atop the list, it is mail fraud, a federal offense punishable by a fine of more than $1,000, or imprisonment of not more than two years, or both.

Anyone who has bought a kit and sent a bond to the top person could be judged guilty of mail fraud, Inspector Smith said.

Smith explained that eventually, an area will become saturated with participants in the chain letter, and people will not be able to sell the kits they have made. But they won't be able to cash two bonds either, because the bonds are made out to someone else.

The only real winners in a chain-letter scheme, he added, are the people who originally put it in motion.

"Normal procedure in a chain-letter scheme is to have the top three people on the (original) list under control," Smith said. They get their money quickly, and soon afterward the pyramid collapses.

"The majority of the individuals are going to be losers," said N. R. Phillips, state savings bond director.

Phillips said his office has received numerous reports of the chain-letter scheme going back several months. In February and March, the scheme was going strong in Omaha and towns along the Missouri River. Phillips said he thought the scheme had died out, but "someone called in the last day or two," with another report.

"Banks are under instructions to refuse to sell bonds in cases where they know or have reason to believe the bonds are being used in a mail fraud scheme," Phillips said.

Grace Krieger, in the bond department of National Bank of Commerce, said that bank has received word from the Federal Reserve Board about the scheme and has alerted its affiliated banks. Other Lincoln banks had similar reports.

"We do refuse to sell them (bonds)," Mrs. Krieger said.

Bank personnel become suspicious when a person asks to buy a $25 bond as a gift, she said. If the buyer gives the recipient's name and address, but gives his own Social Security number. The employee asks if the bond is for the scheme. If the buyer says yes, or is unconvincing with his no, the employee turns him down.

So even before the area gets saturated with members in the chain-letter, the sources of bonds are going to dry up.

Anyone with a complaint about the scheme may register it with the postal inspector's office.

Federal officials stationed in Lincoln are aware of the scheme and say they will prosecute if they receive complaints from persons who lose money in the scheme.

The scheme works this way:

A person, John Doe, buys a "kit" containing a new $25 U.S. savings bond, a list of 10 names and some instructions for $37.50. He mails the enclosed bond to, say, Bill Jones, whose name is at the top of the list. The bond is already made out to Jones.

Then Doe buys two more $25 bonds from a bank at a cost of $18.75 each. He has the bonds put in the name of the No. 2 person on his list, Mary Smith. Then he composes two new lists, with Mrs. Smith's name on top and his name at the bottom. He puts the new lists, copies of the instructions and the bonds he bought into two new kits. Then he sells his kits to two other persons for $37.50 apiece.

Doe spends $75, but gets that amount back when he sells the two kits. The rationale that perpetuates the scheme is that even if the buyer doesn't make it to the top of the list, he at least isn't out any money. And if he does make it to the top of the list, he will receive more than $38,000 in bonds from the 2,046 persons who will have his name atop their lists when he goes from the No. 10 spot to the No. 1 spot.

However, as the scheme fails to point out, when Doe buys his kit, there are at least 2,046 other persons whose name is also No. 10. (As the scheme progresses the participants increase exponentially). So, in order to get Doe, and everyone else in a similar position to the top, the scheme takes 2,097,150 persons.

And, if the scheme progresses much farther, it will take more people than the population of the world to keep the pyramid from collapsing.

Because the scheme is built on such a pyramid and cannot continue, it is fraud. And because the mail is used to perpetuate the scheme by sending the bonds to the person atop the list, it is mail fraud, a federal offense punishable by a fine of more than $1,000, or imprisonment of not more than two years, or both.

Anyone who has bought a kit and sent a bond to the top person could be judged guilty of mail fraud, Inspector Smith said.

Smith explained that eventually, an area will become saturated with participants in the chain letter, and people will not be able to sell the kits they have made. But they won't be able to cash two bonds either, because the bonds are made out to someone else.

The only real winners in a chain-letter scheme, he added, are the people who originally put it in motion.

"Normal procedure in a chain-letter scheme is to have the top three people on the (original) list under control," Smith said. They get their money quickly, and soon afterward the pyramid collapses.

"The majority of the individuals are going to be losers," said N. R. Phillips, state savings bond director.

Phillips said his office has received numerous reports of the chain-letter scheme going back several months. In February and March, the scheme was going strong in Omaha and towns along the Missouri River. Phillips said he thought the scheme had died out, but "someone called in the last day or two," with another report.

"Banks are under instructions to refuse to sell bonds in cases where they know or have reason to believe the bonds are being used in a mail fraud scheme," Phillips said.

Grace Krieger, in the bond department of National Bank of Commerce, said that bank has received word from the Federal Reserve Board about the scheme and has alerted its affiliated banks. Other Lincoln banks had similar reports.

"We do refuse to sell them (bonds)," Mrs. Krieger said.

Bank personnel become suspicious when a person asks to buy a $25 bond as a gift, she said. If the buyer gives the recipient's name and address, but gives his own Social Security number. The employee asks if the bond is for the scheme. If the buyer says yes, or is unconvincing with his no, the employee turns him down.

So even before the area gets saturated with members in the chain-letter, the sources of bonds are going to dry up.

Anyone with a complaint about the scheme may register it with the postal inspector's office.

Superstitions Aren't A Hangup For Them

Text By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

There's an old superstition that it's bad luck for the groom to see the bride in her wedding gown prior to the ceremony.

But a couple who plans a wedding on Friday the 13th can't be very superstitious, so seeing the bride in her gown before the wedding has not been a hangup for Frank McEntarffer and Dawn Brannin.

In fact, if this groom didn't see his bride in the gown before the wedding, the bride might not have her gown by Friday, Aug. 13, when she walks down the aisle in a gown sewn by the man waiting at the altar.

McEntarffer, who will be a senior at Nebraska Wesleyan University with a major in physical education and coaching, is actually making his bride's wedding gown.

He said as a child he was always fascinated by his mother's and grandmother's sewing and in high school took a clothing class.

He said he took a lot of ribbing from his friends including comments that he'd "make somebody a good wife."

However, he proved that an ability to sew can come in handy — even with athletics.

McEntarffer said that the football coach at East High brought down some football pants for the sewing class to repair.

"Home economics teachers and girls don't always know where the padding belongs in football uniforms," he said, noting that this was an easy task for him since he played football.

He says he enjoys sewing and has made shirts and pants for his father, brother and himself and first considered making his bride's gown when he made her a pants outfit this spring.

Dawn, who will be a freshman in home economics at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln this fall, says she doesn't know how to sew.

"I won a $20 gift certificate for fabric at a bridal forum last spring," she said, so Frank sewed the pants outfit after they picked out a pattern together.

"It was then that I asked if I could make her wedding dress," he said.

She said she was delighted and her family had no objection to Frank's making her wedding gown; and the cost is minimal compared to the cost of the $300 gown she liked in a bride's magazine.

In addition to the dollar savings, "This means more, too," she said as she looked admiringly at her fiance.

Finding a pattern similar to the dress she liked was not an easy task.

However, the couple finally found a similar one which with some alterations closely resembles the $300 gown — but will cost only $86 including the headpiece and veil.

The groom-to-be said he'd had few problems with the silk organza over textured crepe gown which features handsewn lace on the bodice and a nine-foot train, but finding times for fitting the gown has presented the most difficulty.

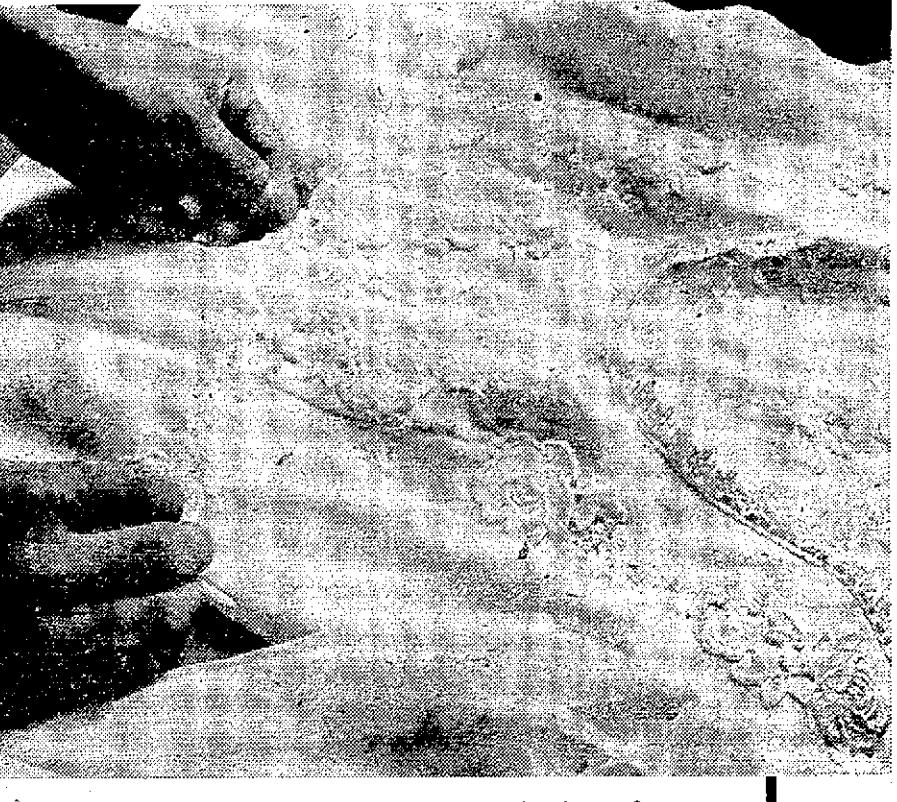

Dawn works evenings and Frank is holding down two jobs this summer, so fitting times have to be wedged in with their work schedules.

Frank said he sewed the dress on muslin first and made the necessary alterations there rather than on the wedding gown fabric.

He said Rose Marie Tondi, who teaches home economics at East High, helped him with the alterations.

Hoping to work in some home economics classes at UNL with his senior year at Wesleyan, Frank sees the ability to sew as a great savings in money as well as a fascinating hobby.

Should Children Know Their 'Real' Parents?

DEAR ABBY: Many parents are disturbed because in some states it is now possible for adult adopted children to "unseal" their records and find out who their biological parents are.

This is an answer to my prayers because somewhere in the world is a 21-year-old girl I gave up for adoption because I was an unwed mother who wanted my child to have a better life than I could give her at the time.

Perhaps my daughter would like to meet me just to say, "Thank you."

HER OTHER MOTHER

DEAR OTHER: Please read on for a letter from a mother who has been on both sides of the adoption table.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 17 I had a baby girl out of wedlock. I gave her up for adoption because her father couldn't marry me. (He was married.)

I hope my daughter wants to know her "real" mother. I want her to know that I have no desire to replace the woman who raised her. I just want my daughter to accept me as her "other mother." I wonder if she realizes that I could have done what many other girls in my position have done — had an abortion. Instead I chose to risk my own life in childbirth in order to give her life.

If my biological daughter were to suddenly locate me, I can see nothing but problems for her, me, my family and the parents who adopted her.

I have never forgotten the baby I gave away, but I hope with all my heart she does not seek me out. The woman who adopted her and raised her from infancy is the only mother she's ever known and is her "real" mother in every sense of the word.

I know, because I am also the mother of an adopted child whom I love every bit as much as my biological children. If my adopted daughter were to seek out her biological mother, deep down I would be crushed.

If my biological daughter were to suddenly locate me, I can see nothing but problems for her, me, my family and the parents who adopted her.

I realize that all adopted children are curious about their biological parents, but in satisfying their curiosity, they are bound to open up a lot of wounds and create many problems.

I think one set of parents is enough for any child. What do you think, Abby?

BOTH SIDES

DEAR BOTH: I agree.

DEAR ABBY: I have a big problem. My husband sits in front of the television hour after hour, day after day, whenever he's home. He hardly ever talks to me anymore.

He even eats his meals in front of the TV! I could take my clothes off and stand in front of the TV stark naked, and he would ask me to move so he could see the TV.

We have no children, and I'm afraid we won't ever have any as long as we have a TV set. It sure is a good method of birth control, but I would really like children.

What should I do? Dismantle the TV, or go out and get myself another man?

I am getting very lonely.

TV WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: How old is your husband? And how old are you? How long have you been married? Is this alleged sexual indifference in favor of the TV something new? Or has it been going on for a long time? Fill me in on the facts, and I'll tell you which to dismantle — the TV or your man.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MARYLAND MOM: When your son starts telling you that he prefers blonde babysitters, he doesn't need one.

Library Criticized

WATERLOO, Ont. (AP) — The American Theological Library Association has criticized the library of Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, the main seminary of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, for barring students of a break-away Seminary-in-Exile from using the library facilities, although allowing students of other denominational seminaries to do so.

Most decliners find it difficult to recognize and execute a squeeze, but actually it's much more difficult for a defender to spot an upcoming squeeze and take the steps necessary to break it up. Certainly Coon's club return at trick five merits an accolade of some sort.

Where Has The Fuzz Gone?

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

What's happened to the fuzz? No, we're not referring to law enforcement officers, but merely to that exterior covering on the currently plentiful blushed fruit — the peach.

If you have been taking advantage of the fresh fruit which is now at its peak in supply and quality at the supermarket, you may notice that peaches now present themselves practically fuzzless, shining and perfectly blushed from pink to red.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in various wash procedures, peaches tumble through circulating water and are gently scrubbed with specially-protected brushes to remove the fuzz, enhance the beauty of the peach and provide perfect out-of-hand eating.

But fuzz or no fuzz, peaches will be around for good eating throughout the summer with the 1976 crop predicted 41% higher than last year, according to USDA reports.

The abundance is due to favorable crop conditions in a number of peach-producing states, particularly Georgia, South Carolina and California.

The freestone peach crop is reported 8% higher than last year and 13% above the three-year average, according to USDA.

Teresa Shaffer, Extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, recommends purchasing fresh peaches with good ground color — cream to a mellow yellow. She says this is a more reliable indicator of maturity than the perfect blush.

She advises not purchasing peaches that are very firm with a green ground color and also avoiding peaches that have large flattened bruises. Those indicate a large area of discolored flesh under the bruise.

Decay in peaches usually starts as a pale tan spot, according to Ms. Shaffer. That will expand in a circle and gradually turn darker.

Peaches are especially juicy and flavorful in July and are low in calories and high in nutrients, Ms. Shaffer said.

"An average size peach contains approximately 50 calories. It is a rich source of vitamin A while also supplying some vitamin C and calcium," she said.

The USDA tells homemakers there's no need to peel the peach when baking peach pies or cakes.

Just slice and add them and you'll save time and the peaches' flavor.

When good quality peaches

can be purchased at low prices, it is simple to prepare those peaches for fresh fruit desserts and salads all winter.

Fresh peaches may be frozen practically just as is or in a syrup, depending on the intended use.

For individual fresh fruit snacks and dessert servings, dip peeled, halved peaches into a sugar syrup to coat them, and freeze individually on cookie sheets. When they're frozen solid, pop the peaches in plastic bags. They'll be ready to use, one at a time, as you need them.

Peaches frozen in a syrup or other liquid (orange juice is delicious) will keep for about a year in the freezer, up to three months in the refrigerator frozen food compartment.

Here is a "three-in-one" peachy pie filling recipe which may be frozen for next winter's pies:

Three-In-One Peachy Pie Filling
4 to 5 lbs. fresh peaches
1/4 cup lemon juice
2 cups sugar

When packing peaches in syrup for freezing, remember to leave an inch or so of head space for expansion. Crumpled wax paper under the lids will keep the peaches submerged in the syrup.

1/4 cup quick-cooking tapioca
1/2 tsp. salt
3 nine-inch foil cake or pie pans.

HOMEMADE FRESH PEACH PIE FILLING IS A BREEZE TO FREEZE. SIMPLY WRAP AND FREEZE FRESH PEACH PIE FILLINGS IN INDIVIDUAL FOIL-LINED PIE PLATES. COME NEXT WINTER, JUST WHIP OUT A PIE FROM THE FREEZER AND ADD A TOP CRUST WHILE IT IS BAKING. WHILE THE PIE FILLING IS BAKING, A STREUSEL, REGULAR PIE PASTRY OR CINNAMON ROLL CRUST MADE FROM BISCUIT MIX MAY BE PREPARED, PLACED ON TOP OF THE FILLING AND RETURNED TO THE OVEN TO FINISH BAKING.

Divide peaches evenly among three 9-inch foil cake or pie pans.

Metric System Slipping In Quietly

The metric system is gradually slipping into our daily lives without many of us noticing it.

And although many hear the word and still shudder, the metric system is just another way to weigh and measure amounts by simply using the multiples of ten.

We already use it in dealing with money: prescription drugs and pharmaceuticals have carried metric system markings for years. Film is sold by meters of length, and energy-conscious Americans are familiar with the term kilowatt.

Actually, it's not necessary to learn the complete metric system in order to use it in everyday life. But the average homemaker is concerned about what change to metric measurements will mean in shopping, cooking, sewing and other things involved in running a household.

The metric system has already touched the kitchens with many packaged foods now carrying labels with weight in grams as well as in ounces. Some soft drinks now are available in liter bottles, and most measuring cups now carry metric measurements along with the customary measurements.

Fruit juices already have both measurements on the label. Here we see 46 fluid ounces or one quart — 14 ounces along with 1.26 liters.

It has been suggested that a metric cup that is 250 milliliters be used for cooking measurements because the standard cup currently used contains 737 milliliters.

A plastic measuring cup featuring ounces and milliliters is now being sold in many housewares departments. The 13 milliliter difference is less than one tablespoon, so people can probably use their present recipes quite well.

Another proposal being considered suggests metric measuring spoons in the following sizes:

1 tablespoon=15 milliliters
1 teaspoon=5 milliliters
1/2 teaspoon=2.5 milliliters
1/4 teaspoon=1.25 milliliters

Most American cooks measure rather than weigh ingredients, but in the purchase of bulk items such as coffee, flour or sugar, weight is used.

The kilogram is equivalent to 2.2 pounds or a little more than can be held in a two-pound coffee can.

According to experts, today's kitchen will change little with the conversion to the metric system. Appliances and cabinets will have about the same exterior dimensions.

Refrigerator and freezer capacities are now measured in cubic feet. Under the metric system, volume capacity will probably be given in liters, as will the volume of the contents, such as milk. That will make it easier to relate to how much the unit will hold and make it easier for homemakers to select the right size refrigerator/freezer for family needs.

Sewing patterns have been marked in centimeters for several years and metric conversion guides for body measurements are available in most new pattern envelopes.

To convert sewing equipment to the metric system should require only a meter stick, metric tape measure and metric gauges. Most notions departments now carry a tape measure that gives inches as well as centimeters.

According to the family economics and management Extension division of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the present system for ready-made garment sizing is confusing, but changing to the metric system could encourage a change in the clothing industry.

Ideally, all garments produced would be labeled with metric dimensions rather than the now-meaningless figures.

The major product in home decorating to be affected by metric measurement will probably be floor coverings, which are now sold by the yard, although room measurements are given in feet and inches.

A house is seldom designed to measure 12- or 15-foot dimensions to accommodate the floor covering industry. Now it is necessary to multiply the length by the width of the room for square footage, divide by nine to get the square yardage, and then multiply by the price per square yard.

Calculating a metric purchase would be simplified by multiplying the metric length of the room by four meters (width of carpet) to arrive at the square meter measurement to buy.

A Dutch firm is currently selling carpet tile in the United States in measurements of 50 by 50 centimeters, which the company says approximates 20 by 20 inches. They come packed 20 squares to a box or five square meters, which measures exactly six square yards, according to the University of Nebraska Cooperative Extension Service. There has been no problem in selling the product on the metric basis.

Upholstery fabric, much like carpeting, is sold by the yard at the standard width of 54 inches or 138 centimeters. Looms could be changed to 140 centimeters. Curtains and draperies are measured by the inch and sold in standard widths. This could necessitate changing the loom widths to be even metric width.

Where Has The Fuzz Gone?

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

What's happened to the fuzz? No, we're not referring to law enforcement officers, but merely to that exterior covering on the currently plentiful blushed fruit — the peach.

If you have been taking advantage of the fresh fruit which is now at its peak in supply and quality at the supermarket, you may notice that peaches now present themselves practically fuzzless, shining and perfectly blushed from pink to red.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in various wash procedures, peaches tumble through circulating water and are gently scrubbed with specially-protected brushes to remove the fuzz, enhance the beauty of the peach and provide perfect out-of-hand eating.

But fuzz or no fuzz, peaches will be around for good eating throughout the summer with the 1976 crop predicted 41% higher than last year, according to USDA reports.

The abundance is due to favorable crop conditions in a number of peach-producing states, particularly Georgia, South Carolina and California.

The freestone peach crop is reported 8% higher than last year and 13% above the three-year average, according to USDA.

Teresa Shaffer, Extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, recommends purchasing fresh peaches with good ground color — cream to a mellow yellow. She says this is a more reliable indicator of maturity than the perfect blush.

She advises not purchasing peaches that are very firm with a green ground color and also avoiding peaches that have large flattened bruises. Those indicate a large area of discolored flesh under the bruse.

Decay in peaches usually starts as a pale tan spot, according to Ms. Shaffer. That will expand in a circle and gradually turn darker.

Peaches are especially juicy and flavorful in July and are low in calories and high in nutrients, Ms. Shaffer said.

"An average size peach contains approximately 50 calories. It is a rich source of vitamin A while also supplying some vitamin C and calcium," she said.

The USDA tells homemakers there's no need to peel the peach when baking peach pies or cakes.

Just slice and add them and you'll save time and the peaches' flavor.

When good quality peaches

Homemade fresh peach pie filling is a breeze to freeze.

Simply wrap and freeze fresh peach pie fillings in individual foil-lined pie plates. Come next winter, just whip out a pie from the freezer and add a top crust while it's baking. While the pie filling is baking, a streusel, regular pie pastry or cinnamon roll crust made from biscuit mix may be prepared, placed on top of the filling and returned to the oven to finish baking.

Here is a "three-in-one"

peachy pie filling recipe which may be frozen for next winter's pies:

Three-In-One Peachy Pie Filling
4 to 5 lbs. fresh peaches
1/4 cup lemon juice
2 cups sugar

1/4 cup quick-cooking tapioca
1/2 tsp. salt
3 nine-inch foil cake or pie pans.

Peel peaches by dropping them into boiling water for 30 seconds; transfer with slotted spoon to cold water. Skins will slip right off. Half and remove pits.

Slice peaches into large bowl (there should be about eight cups); add lemon juice and gently toss to coat.

Combine sugar, tapioca and salt; add to peaches. Let stand 15 minutes.

Divide peaches evenly among three 9-inch foil cake or pie pans.

Double-wrap in freezer paper or heavy-duty aluminum foil; freeze. When needed, remove and unwrap and bake frozen pie filling in 425 degree F. oven for 45 minutes. Add desired top crust and return to oven to finish baking as recipe demands.

Three-In-One Peachy Pie Filling

Survey: Carter Gains Massive Lead Over Ford, Reagan

By LOUIS HARRIS

After a successful and harmonious Democratic convention, Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter has moved out to a massive 66-27% lead over President Ford and a slightly higher 68-26% edge over Gov. Ronald Reagan in the contest for the White House next November.

The current Carter lead is one of the most substantial ever recorded in a modern presidential election. Indeed, these latest Harris Survey results must be viewed as one of the most rapid ascendencies of a candidate to public popularity in the history of American politics. In March, President Ford held a 49-42% lead over the former Georgia governor, and just prior to the Democratic convention, Carter's margin was 13 points, compared to the current 39-point spread.

However, Carter's amazing lead may not be as solid as it seems, when the results of this and several other factors are examined closely:

—Only slightly more than four in 10 voters who say they would vote for Carter feel "very strongly" about their choice, meaning that less than 30% of the total electorate can be solidly placed in the Carter column today.

—For nearly two months, the Democrats and Carter have dominated the news, presenting a unified party to the electorate, while the Republicans have appeared to be torn by dissent and division.

The public has yet to see the final shape of the GOP ticket for the fall election, so that only half the real choice facing the electorate is now evident to the voters.

In this recent survey, among a cross section of 1,451 voters nationwide, the potential third-party candidacy of Eugene McCarthy was weighed into a Carter-Ford pairing. When in the race, McCarthy comes up with 5% of the vote, down from an earlier 10%. Carter's total goes down to 62%, while Ford remains at 27%.

McCarthy receives an identical 5% when pitted against Carter and Reagan. The Democratic nominee obtains 64% of the vote and the former California governor 25% as the GOP nominee. It is then fair to assume that whatever vote McCarthy can amass will come almost exclusively out of the Carter reservoir of votes.

When a candidate leads by the current margin Carter now shows, the third party entry by McCarthy appears to be a token effort at best. However, should the race for the White House narrow, as it likely will later on, McCarthy's 5% vote could make a considerable difference. If McCarthy were to get himself on the ballot in states that cast a majority of the electoral votes, Carter would have to be ahead of his potential Republican opponent by at least 53-47%.

With results as lopsided as these latest survey returns obviously are, breakdowns by key groups become rather meaningless. Indeed, in past elections where one candidate received over 60% of the vote, such as the Johnson landslide in 1964 and the Nixon victory in 1972, the singular characteristic of the vote has been its uniformity among key segments of the electorate.

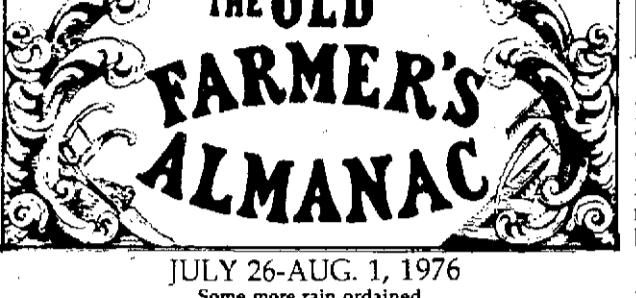

Nonetheless, the three-way contest with Ford and McCarthy does point up some potential areas of Carter weakness: in the West, where Carter receives 57% of the vote; among the college educated where he also has a 57% support; among professional people, from whom he garners 58%; among business executives and small businessmen, from whom he receives 55% of the vote; among white collar people, from whom he gets a similar 55%; among conservatives, where he wins 52%; with independents, from whom he receives 55%; among those who voted for Richard Nixon four years ago, 47%; and among Jewish voters, 55%.

Nevertheless, Carter has moved out to a massive and significant lead in this 1976 election.

Financial Aid More Than Tuition Income

By The Associated Press

A study shows that more money is paid out to the students of state colleges and universities than is taken in from all students in tuition.

The study by the Department of Administrative Services' Budget Division set total net tuition at state supported colleges and universities at $22.8 million, and financial aid to the students at $23.1 million. Of the aid total, $7.3 million came in the form of loans.

At the University of Nebraska-Lincoln alone, 12,500 Nebraska students received some type of state, federal or private financial aid for their education.

"UNL and the Medical Center in the university system saw more dollars go out in grants, scholarships, federal supported loans and waivers than was taken in during the 1975-76 year in tuition, according to a budget division analysis.

"Among the four state colleges, only Kearney State had less in financial aid to its students than that taken in through net tuition payments. Even at Kearney, the difference was minimal," the report said.

At first glance, it might appear that state supported higher education is nearly on a no-tuition basis. While that overall appraisal may be correct, budget analyst Jon Oberg said the financial aid to any one student may be far in excess of the tuition payments.

This would be the case with scholarships, assistantships and loans which pay more than the cost of tuition. Oberg noted that some students receive more than one type of assistance.

Omaha Property Taxes Hiked On Regular Basis

Omaha (AP) — Property taxes are going up in Omaha again, but just how much to the dime has not yet been determined.

Whatever the rate is, it will mark the eighth time in 10 years for those living in the Omaha School District, and the ninth time in 10 years in District 66.

Officials said the consolidated levy — including taxes for schools, city and county government, buses, fire hydrants and other services — will be about 6.2 per cent in the Omaha School District.

In District 66, the increase will be about 5.1 per cent for Omahans. It will be about 7.9 per Hawaii — "How da party was? It was blast, brudda. Da wahines too much!" For $359 from the West Coast you can fly to the Paradise island and have seven nights of hotel room beside the beach at Waikiki.

So recently a mainland wahine bought $359 of this bargain. Then she decided to cut her expenses. Honolulu police picked her up for soliciting. They gave her 12 hours to leave town.

"But I like it here," she said.

Auwe! Along with the Waikiki high-rise comes the high-rise hustler. For many a gaudy peace-time year, the Mamie Stovers took care of the rockbound soldiers along wicket Hotel Street.

When the war came along, they were busted out. The idea was you couldn't corrupt a Regular, but an apple-cheeked Reserve should watch movies.

A hotel man said: "I don't know what's drawing these girls.

We're getting an influx of them.

Maybe it's the low fares. What do you think?"

The hotel man said: "In a way it was quite a testimonial. I mean, maybe the Hawaii Visitors Bureau should have intervened and let her stay."

He said: "Of course, prostitution puts a bad image on the islands. Most tourists think of love in Hawaii as being a free sort of thing.

The hotel man said: "We take some of the temperature off the mainland wahines with free hula lessons."

I mean, while she's learning to wave her hands and hips, she's working on being seductive, know what I mean? She's doing something about it. Like a substitute for getting her hair done. Only better.

"And here she is under the coco palms. Wiggling her hips and making her hands go like birds flying."

A social hostess said: "I don't know how these girls make it. The ones the vice squad arrests, I mean. There must be a lot of men around with no confidence at all. The beach is positively crawling with single women."

She said: "They're very direct about it. They come to me and say: 'I spent a lot of money to get here and a lot of money on clothes. And I want to meet some men!'"

She said: "the tourist people built a strong image of the islands as a place where a single just couldn't miss."

"All I can tell them is, 'Honey, you're on the beach at Waikiki! Go out there and knock 'em dead!'"

Women outnumber men tourists to "the loveliest fleet of islands that lie anchored in any ocean." (Mark Twain said.)

The hotel man said: "We used to give each girl a flower lei and a kiss on the cheek. That was when we had Boat Day. The tourists came by boat. We kept it up when tourists came in by DC-6."

"But now! The planes are landing every few minutes — 350 people spilling out of a jumbo jet. Well, in the luxury hotels we try to put a whole sliced pineapple in the room. And the night maid puts an orchid on the pillow when she turns the bed down."

He said: "When we serve food, we put a vanda orchid on the plate. Friend of mine in hotel business from New York took a look at our kitchen. He said: 'That's the first time I ever saw parsley and orchids on the garnish table.'"

All the hotels along the beach have a social hostess, and one of them said:

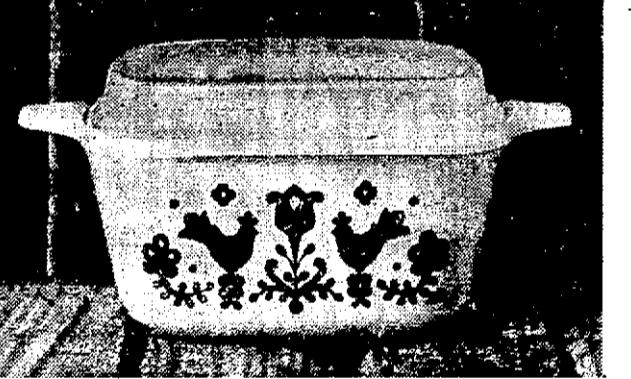

"Our big problem is taking care of the lonely widows and divorcees who come here. They think of Hawaii as wall-to-wall romance. They expect to be swept off their feet by a visiting millionaire. Or a tawny Hawaiian in an outrigger canoe."

She said: "All I can tell them is to get into a bikini and get on the beach. If there's any romance around, it's on the beach."

Survey: Carter Gains Massive Lead Over Ford, Reagan

By LOUIS HARRIS

After a successful and harmonious Democratic convention, Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter has moved out to a massive 66-27% lead over President Ford and a slightly higher 66-26% edge over Gov. Ronald Reagan in the contest for the White House next November.

The current Carter lead is one of the most substantial ever recorded in a modern presidential election. Indeed, these latest Harris Survey results must be viewed as one of the most rapid ascendencies of a candidate to public popularity in the history of American politics. In March, President Ford held a 49-42% lead over the former Georgia governor, and just prior to the Democratic convention, Carter's margin was 13 points, compared to the current 39-point spread.

However, Carter's amazing lead may not be as solid as it seems, when the results of this and several other factors are examined closely:

— Only slightly more than four in 10 voters who say they would vote for Carter prefer "very strongly" about their choice, meaning that less than 30% of the total electorate can be solidly placed in the Carter column today.

— For nearly two months, the Democrats and Carter have dominated the news, presenting a unified party to the electorate, while the Republicans have appeared to be torn by dissent and division.

The public has yet to see the final shape of the GOP ticket for the fall election, so that only half the real choice facing the electorate is now evident to the voters.

In this recent survey, among a cross section of 1,451 voters nationwide, the potential third-party candidacy of Eugene McCarthy was weighed into a Carter-Ford pairing. When in the race, McCarthy comes up with 5% of the vote, down from an earlier 10%, Carter's total goes down to 62%, while Ford remains at 27%.

Rise

McCarthy receives an identical 5% when pitted against Carter and Reagan. The Democratic nominee obtains 64% of the vote and the former California governor 25% as the GOP nominee. It is then fair to assume that whatever vote McCarthy can amass will come almost exclusively out of the Carter reservoir of votes.

When a candidate leads by the current margin Carter now shows, the third party entry by McCarthy appears to be a token effort at best. However, should the race for the White House narrow, as it likely will later on, McCarthy's 5% vote could make a considerable difference. If McCarthy were to get himself on the ballot in states that cast a majority of the electoral votes, Carter would have to be ahead of his potential Republican opponent by at least 53-47%.

With results as lopsided as these latest survey returns obviously are, breakdowns by key groups become rather meaningless. Indeed, in past elections where one candidate received over 80% of the vote, such as the Johnson landslide in 1964 and the Nixon victory in 1972, the singular characteristic of the vote has been its uniformity among key segments of the electorate.

Financial Aid More Than Tuition Income

By The Associated Press

A study shows that more grants are paid out to the students of state colleges and universities than is taken in from all students in tuition.

The study by the Department of Administrative Services' Budget Division set total net tuition at state supported colleges and universities at $22.8 million, and financial aid to the students at $23.1 million. Of the aid total, $7.3 million came in the form of loans.

At the University of Nebraska-Lincoln alone, 12,500 Nebraska students received nearly 95 per cent of the funds at Kearney, but out of state students were getting 25 per cent to 40 per cent of the aid at the other three colleges.

Oberg said the information was important background for future budgeting decisions. Tuition and state student aid are part of the yearly higher education budgets.

"The boards have to take it into account, and both tuition and financial aid are budgeted by the Legislature," Oberg said. Previously, only state assistance has been considered in budgeting for the universities and colleges.

"We want to know what's going on and the current policies," Oberg said. One of those policies being watched is the division between aid given to the basis of need and that granted for service.

Under service-related grants are the work study program, assistantships, and athletic scholarships.

"The reason for gathering the information is not only to find out what we are spending but what alternatives there are in financial aid and tuition," Oberg said.

"A low tuition policy is, in effect, financial aid for everyone," he said.

Omaha Property Taxes Hiked On Regular Basis

Omaha (AP) — Property taxes are going up in Omaha again, but just how much to the dime has not yet been determined.

Whatever the rate is, it will mark the eighth time in 10 years for those living in the Omaha School District will be about 112.57 mills, or $112.57 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation.

In District 66, the overall levy appears will be 111.96 mills. In the Millard district, Omahans will pay about 115.287 mills, and in the Ralston district, about 114.88 mills.

A survey indicated that no matter where you live in Omaha, more than half your property tax dollars go for schools.

Hawaii — "How da party was? It was blast, brudda. Da wahines too much!" For $359 from the West Coast you can fly to the Paradise islands and have seven nights of hotel room beside the beach at Waikiki.

So recently a mainland wahine bought $359 of this bargain.

Then she decided to cut her expenses. Honolulu police picked her up for soliciting. They gave her 12 hours to leave town.

"But I like it here," she said.

— Auwe! Along with the Waikiki high-rise comes the high-rise hustler. For many a gaudy peace-time year, the Mamie Stovers took care of the rockbound soldiers along wicket Hotel Street.

When the war came along, they were busted out. The idea was you couldn't corrupt a Regular, but an apple-cheeked Reserve should watch movies.

He said: "Of course, prostitution puts a bad image on the islands. Most tourists think of love in Hawaii as being a free sort of thing."

The hotel man said: "We take some of the temperature off the mainland wahines with free hula lessons."

"I mean, while she's learning to wave her hands and hips, she's working on being seductive, know what I mean? She's doing something about it. Like a substitute for getting her hair done. Only better."

Two Californians Pedal Into Lincoln On Tandem

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

While the top U.S. athletes are competing in the Montreal Olympics, Steve Jeschien and Stan Kuhl, both of Sunnyvale, Calif., are working on a world record of their own.

Steve, 19, and Stan, 20, are planning to set a world record on their tandem bicycle by traveling from sunnyvale to Washington, D.C., and back again in three months.

The pair left Sunnyvale June 29 and pedaled into Lincoln Friday afternoon. They plan to be in the nation's capital Aug. 5 and they're sure they will be back home Sept. 30.

Sunburned with peeling noses and cracked lips, the two were easily distinguished from Lincoln's regular bikers. Their two-seated bike was pulling a small trailer packed to the limit with sleeping bags, clothes, bike parts, tools, a tire pump, stoves, cameras, and even a tripod, which they use nearly every day.

"We're not doing it only for the record," Stan said. "We're doing it just for fun, but since there is a record why not?"

According to the native Californians, the last two to set a tandem bike record made the coast-to-coast trip in four months.

"We're only 19 and 20, so why not have something to look back on?" Stan said.

Averaging approximately 100 miles a day, the dynamic duo gets up at 6:30 every morning and calls it quits at 6 p.m. daily.

Sleeping mostly in campgrounds, parks, cornfields or on roadsides, the two young men sometimes take advantage of empty beds in various community jails.

"In Torrington, Wyo., they were really businesslike," Stan said. "They even took our fingerprints and mug shots. But at Kearney (Neb.) it was great."

"We just walked in and they gave us a place," Steve concurred. "We watched television and talked with everyone there."

So far, Stan and Steve have had few problems along the way. Aside from two flats, their trip has had only one day of delay in Jackson, Wyo., "where we had to have both wheels rebuilt."

But they have had plenty of time to gaze at the countryside (much of which they have recorded on film) and to evaluate road systems.

"Oregon has lots of roads with no towns on them," Stan said.

"Idaho has bumpy roads," interjected Steve.

"And Nebraska, well Nebraska has narrow roads," Stan continued. "We see a lot of cars driving around that say Roads Department, State of Nebraska. You always see them driving around but you never see them doing any work. And the roads here are so narrow."

Contrary to what most Lincolners might think, Steve and Stan said they haven't found Nebraska as hot and humid as they were told it would be.

The bikers have run (or pedaled) into four days of rain. But that's no problem. Along the way the innovative pair purchased large, plastic garbage bags.

"We just cut a hole in the bottom and pull them down over our heads," Steve explained matter-of-factly.

But the two are not rookies when it comes to cycling tours. Three years ago, on "regular" bikes they rode 4,825 miles to New York City in 1½ months.

"In Torrington, Wyo., they were really

Marine General Says Corps Becoming Pickier

Omaha (AP) — The commander of the 4th Marine Division said the corps is looking more carefully for the "few good men" it seeks.

Maj. Gen. Edward J. Miller was in Omaha over the weekend for a reunion of his old outfit, the 5th Division, which fought at Iwo Jima in World War II.

"I think the Marine Corps has made some mistakes," Miller said in referring to recruit deaths from combat training injuries.

Miller said the Marines are recruiting a higher percentage of men who are at least high school graduates than before the

"recruit-death controversy."

"The borderline guys are not getting in," he said. "More than 250 recruiters were relieved last year."

The general said additional officers now oversee training procedures for closer supervision and less chance of injury.

Of the 5th Division's fighting on Iwo Jima, he said it "really thinned them out." The 40-day battle claimed 19,000 casualties among the 80,000 who went ashore, he said.

Miller is a Minnesota native, now stationed in California, and one of about 250 attending the reunion.

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Election Commissioner Mike Boyle said he would ask the County Board Tuesday to approve a $495,000 agreement for purchase of an optional scanner to count election ballots.

Boyle said the machine will mean elimination of 1,440 members of the voting counting board, four in each of 382 precincts. He added that it will result in the saving of more than $40,000 in November.

Two Californians Pedal Into Lincoln On Tandem

By GRACIA MCANDREW
Star Staff Writer

While the top U.S. athletes are competing in the Montreal Olympics, Steve Jeschien and Stan Kuhl, both of Sunnyvale, Calif., are working on a world record of their own.

Steve, 19, and Stan, 20, are planning to set a world record on their tandem bicycle by traveling from sunnyvale to Washington, D.C., and back again in three months.

The pair left sunnyvale June 29 and pedaled into Lincoln Friday afternoon. They plan to be in the nation's capital Aug. 5 and they're sure they will be back home Sept. 30.

Sunburned with peeling noses and cracked lips, the two were easily distinguished from Lincoln's regular bikers. Their two-seated bike was pulling a small trailer packed to the limit with sleeping bags, clothes, bike parts, tools, a tire pump, stoves, cameras, and even a tripod, which they use nearly every day.

"We're not doing it only for the record," Stan said, "We're doing it just for fun, but since there is a record why not?"

According to the native Californians, the last two to set a tandem bike record made the coast-to-coast trip in four months.

"We're only 19 and 20, so why not have something to look back on?" Stan said.

Averaging approximately 100 miles a day, the dynamic duo gets up at 6:30 every morning and calls it quits at 6 p.m. daily.

Sleeping mostly in campgrounds, parks, cornfields or on roadsides, the two young men sometimes take advantage of empty beds in various community jails.

"In Torrington, Wyo., they were really businesslike," Stan said. "They even took our fingerprints and mug shots. But at Kearney (Neb.) it was great."

"We just walked in and they gave us a place," Steve concurred. "We watched television and talked with everyone there."

So far, Stan and Steve have had few problems along the way. Aside from two flats, their trip has had only one day of delay in Jackson, Wyo., where we had to have both wheels rebuilt."

But they have had plenty of time to gaze at the countryside (much of which they have recorded on film) and to evaluate road systems.

"Oregon has lots of roads with no towns on them," Stan said.

"Idaho has bumpy roads," interjected Steve.

"And Nebraska, well Nebraska has narrow roads," Stan continued. "We see a lot of cars driving around that say Roads Department, State of Nebraska. You always see them driving around but you never see them doing any work. And the roads here are so narrow."

Contrary to what most Lincolners might think, Steve and Stan said they haven't found Nebraska as hot and humid as they were told it would be.

The bikers have run (or pedaled) into four days of rain. But that's no problem. Along the way the innovative pair purchased large, plastic garbage bags.

"We just cut a hole in the bottom and pull them down over our heads," Steve explained matter-of-factly.

But the two are not rookies when it comes to cycling tours. Three years ago, on "regular" bikes they rode 4,825 miles to New York City in 1½ months.

"In Torrington, Wyo., they were really

Marine General Says Corps Becoming Pickier

Omaha (AP) — The commander of the 4th Marine Division said the corps is looking more carefully for the "few good men" it seeks.

Maj. Gen. Edward J. Miller was in Omaha over the weekend for a reunion of his old outfit, the 5th Division, which fought at Iwo Jima in World War II.

"I think the Marine Corps has made some mistakes," Miller said in referring to recruit deaths from combat training injuries.

Miller said the Marines are recruiting a higher percentage of men who are at least high school graduates than before the recruit-death controversy.

"The borderline guys are not getting in," he said. "More than 250 recruiters were relieved last year."

The general said additional officers now oversee training procedures for closer supervision and less chance of injury.

Of the 5th Division's fighting on Iwo Jima, he said it "really thinned them out." The 40-day battle claimed 19,000 casualties among the 60,000 who went ashore, he said.

Miller is a Minnesota native, now stationed in California, and one of about 250 attending the reunion.

Official Will Ask Board For Vote Aid

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County Election Commissioner Mike Boyle said he would ask the County Board Tuesday to approve a $495,000 agreement for purchase of an optional scanner to count election ballots.

Boyle said the machine will mean elimination of 1,440 members of the voting counting board, four in each of 382 precincts. He added that it will result in the saving of more than $40,000 in November.

The machine can read and record up to 600 ballots a minute. He said the quick counting also will produce savings in salaries of other election workers paid by the hour.

An optional scanner was used to count delegate votes in the May primary election.

More Guard Units Training

Fort Carson, Colo. (UPI) — For the third time this summer, units of the Nebraska Army National Guard 67th Infantry Brigade (mech) are here as part of their 15-day annual field training.

The 2nd Battalion, 134th Infantry, along with personnel from the 67th Support Battalion are conducting live fire and other exercises.

The units will conclude their training Saturday.

Buffaloes, Too

Jefferson City, Mo. (UPI) — The Missouri Conservation Commission says buffaloes, like cattle, have hollow, permanent horns.

The Grand Island Singers will close the concert with selections from "How The West Was Won." Between selections the Rev. John Sievers will read from the works of Willa Cather, John Neihardt and Mari Sandoz.

Before the concert Elaine Grove, a member of the Old-Time Fiddlers Association and the Omaha Symphony, guitarist George Dahir and the O'Neill Dancers will host a program.

Retail Sales Go Up 21% In First Quarter

Net taxable retail sales in Nebraska rose 21% to more than $1.4 billion the first quarter of 1976.

The figures, supplied in a report by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, are based on a comparison of the opening three months of 1975 and 1976.

Net taxable retail sales the first quarter of 1975 exceeded $1.17 billion.

The report showed a steady percentage increase in taxable retail sales over the last 15 months ending April 1.

"Comparatively, the year-to-year quarterly increases have been as follows:

"In 1975, first quarter, 1.3%; second quarter, 4.6%; third quarter, 9.6%; fourth quarter, 10%; and, in 1976, first quarter, 21.1%."

The report, signed by Edward L. Hauswald of the bureau, showed that retail sales gains were fairly uniform across the state.

"Consideration of the geographic pattern of change reveals that the largest gains in 1976 were dispersed throughout the state," the report said.

"No one particular area appears to have been affected more than others in a major way by the recovery of retail activity."

Hauswald indicated that only Chase County reported a decrease in dollar volume compared with the same period a year ago.

The report noted that Chase was joined by McPherson, Deuel and Morrill Counties in having sluggish sales that didn't "offset the combined general price-level and population increase."

Some counties did quite well, including the state's trio containing the most populous cities. He is also qualified as a Registered Representative to provide mutual funds through our affiliate, Lincoln Equities Corporation, of Lincoln, Nebraska.

Now-$1 enrolls you in the new Physicians Hospital Plan that lets you choose your plan and renewal rate. It pays you cash benefits from the very first day you're in the hospital— $900 a month ($30 a day).

We guarantee to issue you this insurance—regardless of your age, health or family size. Then you can renew for as little as $7.55 a month—depending on your age.

- Pays cash benefits from the very first day of hospitalization.
- Pays $900 a month cash—$30 a day—for you, your wife and children.
- 50% cash increase for cancer and heart attacks.
- New sicknesses and accidents are both covered immediately.
- No limit to the number of days you can collect cash benefits.
- Cash benefits paid direct to you—to spend as you wish—unless you tell us otherwise.
- Guaranteed renewable for life.
- Pays over and above any other insurance you may have—including Medicare.

These days, one of the most scary things about going to the hospital is the final bill. Inflation has driven up the average price of hospitalization in the United States to $130 a day according to the American Hospital Association. So even if you already have basic hospital insurance, it only covers part of the cost. You have to come up with the rest.

Meanwhile, if you're hospitalized for any length of time, your income may stop. And those bills will keep piling up at home—rent, loans, mortgage, telephone, utilities, credit card and all the rest. Pretty soon, you could find most of your savings are eaten up. You could even wind up deeply in debt.

Now for the good news: Physicians Mutual Insurance Company—run by doctors since 1902—has created this new Physicians Hospital Plan to help give you and your family extra protection against the high cost of hospitalization. Here's how it works—and why you should enroll now:

$900 a month—$30 a day—cash!

Hospital rates are usually the same for everybody. That's why this policy pays the same $30 a day cash benefit when you, your wife or any of your children are hospitalized for any covered sickness or accident. Compare these benefits with other policies that pay reduced benefits for dependents.

50% increase in cash benefits for cancer and heart attack: $1350 a month, $45 a day.

No one likes to think about getting cancer or having a heart attack. But it happens all the time. About 53 million Americans now living will eventually have cancer. That's 1 in 4 persons.* And it's estimated that nearly 4 million people have a history of heart attack. We sincerely hope you never have to collect. But if you should, daily benefits are increased 50% if you or any covered member of your family are hospitalized for cancer (including Leukemia and Hodgkin's Disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction, coronary thrombosis and coronary occlusion).

Double benefits for you and your wife!

When your wife is covered and both of you are hospitalized at the same time due to accidents, your daily benefits are increased. That's right, you get twice the regular cash benefit—$3,600 a month ($120 a day) to help you through this emergency. By the way, hospitalization doesn't have to be due to the same accident: you and your wife could be injured in unrelated accidents.

*American Cancer Society

American Heart Association

Pays you maternity benefits, too!

You'll collect full benefits—$30 a day—for hospitalization due to pregnancy or any pregnancy complication, if coverage includes your wife and if your policy has been in force for 10 months or more. There's no added cost to you!

No waiting period for accidents or new sicknesses.

You're covered the very minute your policy is issued and put in force for new sicknesses—and accidents. That means you could be rushed to the hospital a few minutes after you get your policy—and be able to start collecting your $30 a day benefits immediately, starting that very day!

You get lifetime coverage and benefits.

There's no limit on the number of days for which you can collect cash benefits. You can be hospitalized as often as necessary and stay as long as you have to—knowing that your $30 a day benefits cannot run out. Our plan will pay you benefits for as long as you're hospitalized—even for life!

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance you have.

Remember, this is extra, supplemental protection. Your benefits are paid over and above any other insurance you may carry—including Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Major Medical and Medicare. This policy is designed to help you make up the difference between your total hospital bill and what your other insurance will pay.

Your benefits are not taxable.

Your benefits from your Physicians Mutual Policy are not taxable by any level of government. They are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

Your policy is guaranteed renewable.

Don't forget, this extra protection is yours as long as you want to have it and pay your premiums when due. We cannot drop you or cancel your coverage because your health changes, or because you're a few years older, or because you've submitted a number of claims. On the other hand, you can drop your policy on any renewal date. Also, your premium can never be increased unless premiums are raised on all policies like yours in your entire state.

Please note these exceptions.

Pre-existing conditions (health problems that became evident or were medically treated before the effective date of the policy) are not covered for one year from the date the policy is issued. Half-benefits ($15 a day) are paid for up to 4 weeks confinement due to mental disorder. Not covered is hospitalization for alcoholism, drug addiction or any condition covered by Workmen's Compensation or Employers Liability Law benefits. Confinement in nursing homes, Federal hospitals, or the self-care, extended-care or convalescent units of hospitals is not covered. Pregnancy or any consequence is covered only if husband and wife are both covered.

Backed by Physicians Mutual—the company run by doctors since 1902.

From its founding in 1902 until 1962, the Company specialized in health insurance for physicians, surgeons and dentists exclusively. Then, recognizing the growing need for insurance to supplement basic hospital coverages, Physicians Mutual began making such protection available to the general public. And was one of the first companies to do so. Today, our various policies protect over 1,000,000 Americans in all walks of life.

Remember, you're doing business with a company that delivers what it promises. Last year, we paid claims totaling over $48,000,000 on all policies. That's a return of over 70% of premium income paid out in benefits to policyholders—one of the highest in the entire insurance industry.

Physicians Mutual Insurance Company is a mutual insurance company headquartered in Omaha, Nebraska. It is not affiliated with any national, state or local medical association.

We can't say "No" to you.

Don't worry, we guarantee to issue you a policy. You will not be turned down because of your age, health or size of your family.

As soon as we receive your Enrollment Form, we will issue your policy (P350/360 Series) and put it in force. From that day on—even before you receive your policy in the mail—you're covered for new sicknesses and accidents. Naturally, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis.

If you're already a Physicians Mutual policyholder and would like information about additional coverage available to you, please write for details.

You can enroll in this new Physicians Hospital Policy right from this page. All you need to do is fill out the short Enrollment Form and mail it together with $1—which pays for your first month.

These days, one of the most scary things about going to the hospital is the final bill. Inflation has driven up the average price of hospitalization in the United States to $130 a day according to the American Hospital Association. So even if you already have basic hospital insurance, it only covers part of the cost. You have to come up with the rest.

Meanwhile, if you're hospitalized for any length of time, your income may stop. And those bills will keep piling up at home—rent, loans, mortgage, telephone, utilities, credit card and all the rest. Pretty soon, you could find most of your savings are eaten up. You could even wind up deeply in debt.

Now for the good news: Physicians Mutual Insurance Company—run by doctors since 1902—has created this new Physicians Hospital Plan to help give you and your family extra protection against the high cost of hospitalization. Here's how it works—and why you should enroll now:

$900 a month—$30 a day—cash!

Hospital rates are usually the same for everybody. That's why this policy pays the same $30 a day cash benefit when you, your wife or any of your children are hospitalized for any covered sickness or accident. Compare these benefits with other policies that pay reduced benefits for dependents.

50% increase in cash benefits for cancer and heart attack: $1350 a month, $45 a day.

No one likes to think about getting cancer or having a heart attack. But it happens all the time. About 53 million Americans now living will eventually have cancer. That's 1 in 4 persons.* And it's estimated that nearly 4 million people have a history of heart attack. We sincerely hope you never have to collect. But if you should, daily benefits are increased 50% if you or any covered member of your family are hospitalized for cancer (including Leukemia and Hodgkin's Disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction, coronary thrombosis and coronary occlusion).

Double benefits for you and your wife!

When your wife is covered and both of you are hospitalized at the same time due to accidents, your daily benefits are increased. That's right, you get twice the regular cash benefit—$3,600 a month ($120 a day) to help you through this emergency. By the way, hospitalization doesn't have to be due to the same accident: you and your wife could be injured in unrelated accidents.

A Special Invitation to Folks 65 and Over.

Physicians Mutual warmly welcomes your enrollment in this new extra protection hospital plan. And we guarantee to accept you regardless of your age and health.

Perhaps you're thinking that because you have Medicare, you don't need additional coverage. Not so. Despite its many fine features, Medicare does not cover all of your hospital expenses. No rate increase at age 65.

We also know most older folks are on a fixed and often limited budget. So, instead of raising rates when you become 65, we pay half-benefits ($15 a day) for the first 60 days of hospitalization after age 65. You get the full $30 a day cash benefits after that. And your monthly premium continues to be the same as when you first enrolled in the plan.

So, you'll have cash coming in when you're laid up in the hospital—regardless of how long you may have to stay. Enroll today in this new, extra protection hospital plan.

Your policy comes in this handsome vinyl wallet.

It's a convenient way to keep your important personal papers in one place. With your policy, you also receive a Claim Form. It's easy to use and assures prompt processing of your claim when an accident or sickness puts you in the hospital.

U.S. Women Upset E. German Swimmers

MONTREAL (UPI) — A scholar from Morehouse College, hungry for recognition, got it when he set a world record in the hurdles Sunday. Two more U.S. men swimmers set world records, and Mac Wilkins, a bearded American, won the discus "for myself" and blasted officials for "hassling" him.

But on a day when records were mixed with a little controversy and a little politics, the biggest win of all for the U.S. Olympic team came when it was least expected.

A sellout crowd of over 9,000 jammed into the new Olympic Swimming Pool, expecting to see Kornelia Ender, the 17-year-old daughter of an East German army officer, become the first woman athlete in Olympic history to win five gold medals in one year.

Her first four had been won in world record time.

Adding to the drama, Ender's 66-year-old grandmother, who escaped the Iron Curtain when Kornelia was a baby, was in the stands Sunday night after they held a tearful, 50-minute reunion several hours before.

It was the first time the grandmother, who now lives in Kansas, had seen Kornelia swim in person and the first time she had seen her at all since leaving East Germany in 1959.

The stage was set perfectly, but a gutsy group of young American women refused to play their part.

While America's men swimmers were dominating their half of the competition, winning 12 of their 13 events, finishing 1-2 in nine of them and taking 27 of a possible 35 medals, the women failed to win a gold medal in the first 12 events. Not since 1962 had the U.S. women gone all the way through the Olympics without winning a race.

But that is what they were facing Sunday night when it came down to the last swimming event of the Games, the 400-meter freestyle relay.

Ender, swimming the leadoff leg for the East Germans, put her team a body length ahead of Kim Peyton, the leadoff American. Wendy Boglioli narrowed the margin a little on the second leg and then Jill Sterkel, a 15-year-old high school student, produced the swimming that actually won the race.

Sterkel got a quick start and turned over a lead to anchor woman Shirley Babashoff, the 19-year-old who four times this past week had come close to winning, only to wind up with a silver medal each time.

Babashoff held the lead.

The time was 3:44.82, four seconds under the world record an East German team set last month, and at the end the four young Americans were doing an impromptu victory celebration at the end of the pool.

It was the seventh gold medal of the day for the U.S. Sunday, a sharp reversal from the dismal performance on Saturday when the Americans were shut out in two of their best track and field events and the men swimmers lost their only race of the Games.

The other swimming winners Sunday night were Rod Strachan, a world record 4:23.68 in the 400 meter individual medley, and Jim Montgomery, becoming the first ever to swim 100 meters under 50 seconds, a 49.99 in the 100 freestyle.

Edwin Moses won the 400 meter hurdles in the world record time 47.64 seconds, Wilkins won the discus with a throw of 221-5/8, Ted Coffin of Strafford, Vt., rode a borrowed horse to victory in the individual dressage phase of equestrian competition — the first American ever to win that gold medal — and the U.S. also took the team title.

Two more American boxers also fought their way into the quarter-finals, making it a total of six who have gotten that far. Welterweight Clint Jackson, a 22-year-old deputy sheriff from Nashville, Tenn., knocked out Wesly Felix of Haiti in 1:15 of the first round, and light welterweight Ray Leonard of Palmer Park, Md., decisioned Clint McKenzie of Britain.

However, Charles Walker, a 19-year-old tap dancer from Mesa, Ariz., lost a split decision to Jerzy Rybicki of Poland, and blamed it on "pure ignorance" by the judges.

That was mild, however, compared to the blast leveled at U.S. Olympic officials by the bearded Wilkins, who holds the world record in the discus.

"I have to say this was an achievement for myself," said Wilkins. "It was nice to have all the Americans here rooting for me and I was worried I might let them down, but I'd still have to say I did this for myself."

Wilkins and shotputter Al Feuerbach moved out of the Olympic Village at the start of the Games and did not return until last Wednesday. He said the USOC was "hassling" him about it and "gave me an extremely difficult time."

"They threatened to throw me off the team," Wilkins complained.

Moses, who never before had competed in international competition, did not even become a 400 meter hurdler until March. He carries a 3.5 grade point average of a possible 4.0 at Morehouse, the Atlanta institution that Martin Luther King attended.

and has been running track for seven years without any recognition.

"It's about time something happened to me," he said.

After his record-setting victory, Moses—who is black—and silver medalist Mike Shine—who is white—embraced and did a victory lap holding hands. Shine is from Youngsville, Pa.

Another world record was set on the track by a barechested Cuban named Alberto Juantorena. He knocked 2-10ths of a second off the record in the 800-meter run, covering the distance in 1:43.50 and denying Rich Wohlhuter the gold medal he had been chasing since falling down in a heat at Munich four years ago.

Wohlhuter, the 1974 Sullivan Award winner as America's top Amateur athlete, finished third.

West Germany's Anneliese Richter won the women's 100 meters in 11.08 seconds after setting a world record, 11.01, in the semi-finals.

With her failure—her teammates' failure, really—Sunday night, Ender wound up the Games tied with Holland's Fanny Blankers-Koen, who won four gold medals in track at the 1948 Olympics in London.

Her little, white-haired grandmother, Rosalee Lehmann, however, was happy just to get the chance to see Kornelia in person. She and her husband, Ender's step-grandfather, held a private reunion over "cookies, white wine, chocolates and coffee" in the Olympic Village with Ender and her fiance, Roland Matthes, who won four backstroke gold medals for East Germany in 1968 and 1972.

"Everything went very well," Mrs. Lehmann said. "I said, 'guten tag, Kornelia,' and she hugged me and I hugged her."

"I cried and she had tears in her eyes, too. I asked how she is, and how is the family. She was very happy."

Kornelia had hoped to be able to repay the gifts with a fifth gold medal, but the Americans took care of that.

Monday night, however, another team of young Americans start the drive for the game the country is waiting for. The U.S. Olympic basketball team has a 10 p.m. semifinal date against Canada and the winner will play the winner of the Yugoslavia semifinal in Tuesday night's tie-

Track and field finals on Monday's schedule include the 10,000 meters, where Lasse Viren of Finland is the defender, and the pole vault featuring Americans Dave Roberts and Earl Bell, who exchanged world records this year.

Lockhart Wins Midwest Race

By KEN HAMBLETON

Star Sports Writer

Craig Lockhart moved to the inside on the fourth turn of the 20th lap and slid past Dick Jensen to gain the lead and go on to win the 25-lap super stock feature race Sunday night at Midwest Speedway.

Lockhart of Red Cloud, who has never finished lower than third place at Midwest, started in the seventh spot in the 15-car field and quickly jumped into contention for the lead.

Billy Myers took the early lead in the race after passing Al Truax on the second lap but two laps later, Jensen, the point leader, zipped in front and appeared to be an easy winner.

But Lockhart, who was trailing Myers, finally found the groove in the track and started to press Jensen.

Just as Lockhart pulled even with the Aurora driver on the first turn of the 18th lap, a slower car slipped into his path forcing him to slow down and lose considerable ground to Jensen.

One lap later, though, Norma Robinson spun, bringing out the yellow flag and causing a restart, which closed the gap between Jensen and Lockhart once again.

Then on the final turn of the first lap after the restart, Lockhart dove low into the turn and forced Jensen into the loose dirt high on the track and took over the lead.

Dean Ward, who has won the last two features at Midwest, experienced mechanical problems and was forced to go to the rear of the pack following a spin early in the race. But the Grand Island driver managed to finish fourth behind Myers, who lost a three-lap dash to the finish with Jensen.

"I think I could have caught Jensen without the restart even though the slower car really gave him an edge," Lockhart said referring to the 18th lap.

"I had been backing off for Jensen all night long and when I slipped in front of him on the 20th lap I felt it was his turn to back off," said Lockhart, a two-time feature winner.

"He (Jensen) used the cushion and there was no other place for me to pass him except on the inside," said Lockhart, who also won the trophy dash.

Lee Schaefer of Garland won his hobby stock feature race of the year, nipping trophy dash winner Rick Paulus by less than a car length in the 15-lap main sportsman event.

Schaefer took the lead on the first lap after a restart on the second lap and stayed ahead of traffic and trouble throughout the contest. But Paulus, who started 12th in the 15-car field, worked his way up to second on the 11th lap when he passed Lincolnite Bob Loll on the back straightaway.

Then with a quarter-lap difference between the leader and the second place, Paulus made up the difference in the final three laps. But on the final turn Paulus went high in the turn allowing Schaefer to gain the slight edge he needed to win.

"I don't care how close anybody is to me as long as they don't pass me," said Schaefer, who drives a car owned and built by Virgil Studebaker, also of Garland. "I was lucky the top drivers out here had to start at the rear of the pack because they had to work a lot harder than I did, by starting in front."

Kermit Ekstrum won the hobby stock B feature ahead of Larry Barlow of Lincoln and Del Kugel of Wahoo. Ekstrum and Kugel started towards the rear of the pack but were able to work to the front with Barlow by the ninth lap of the 12-lap race.

The super stockers will be returning to Midwest along with the top drivers from across the state Wednesday for the second leg of the TriCity Challenge race series. Racing is slated to start at 7:30 p.m.

U.S. Cagers On Television

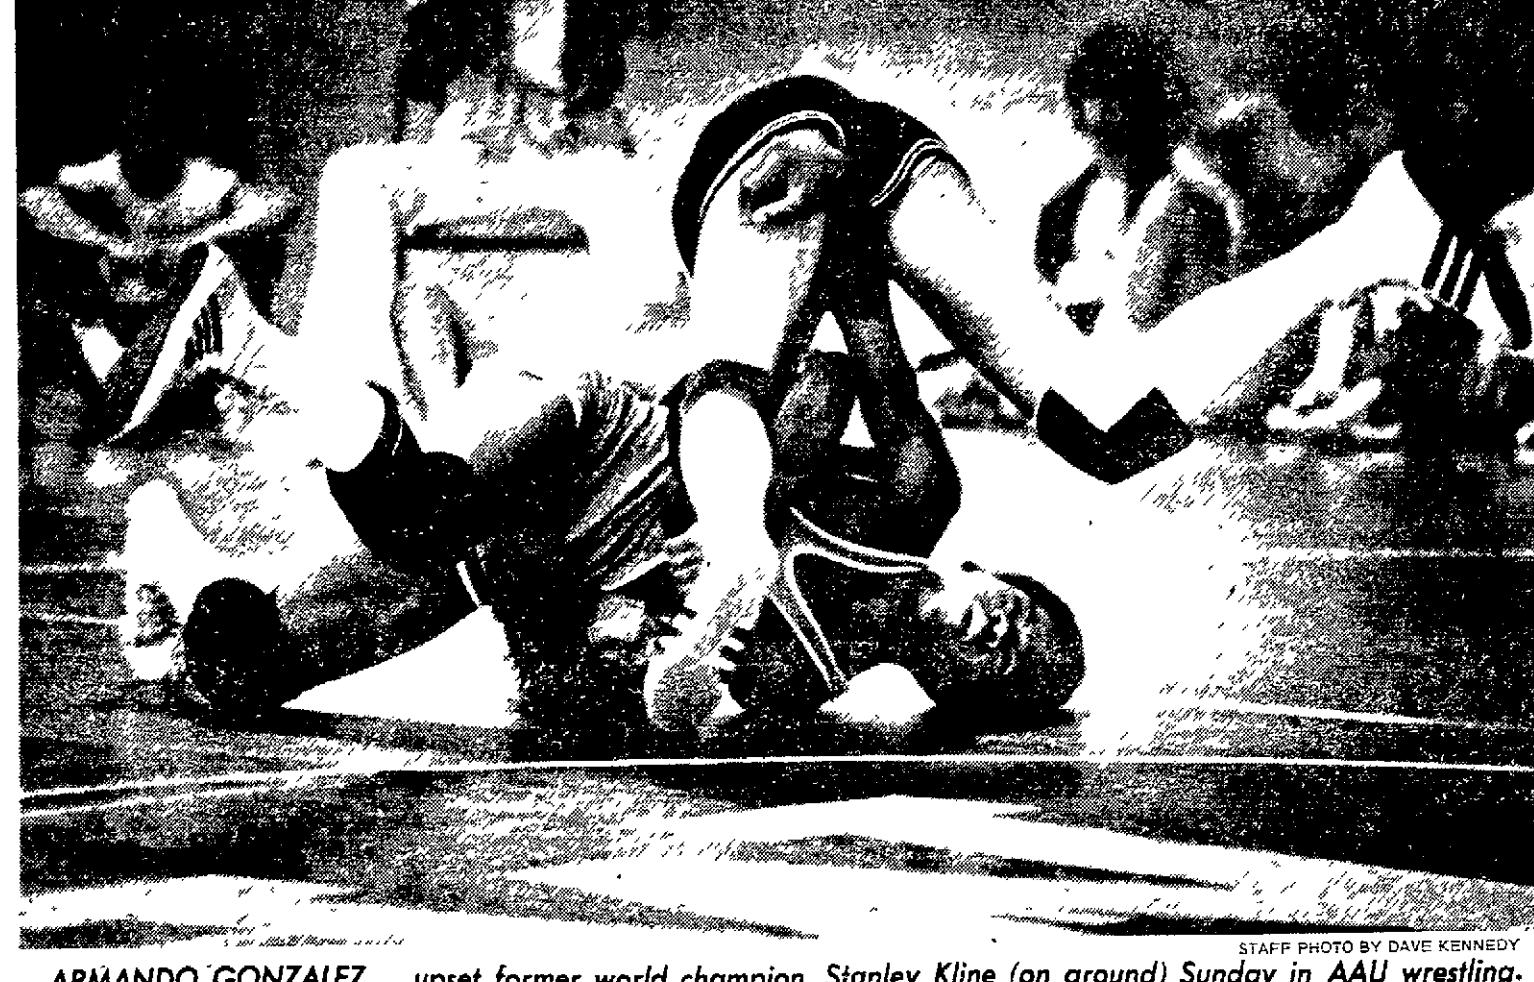

Montreal (AP) — The United States takes on Canada in an Olympic semifinal basketball game Monday night as ABC-TV's coverage of the Summer Games continues.

The game is scheduled to begin at 10 p.m., EDT. The Soviet Union faces Yugoslavia in the other semifinal. The two winners meet for the gold medal Tuesday night.

The network will televise 4½ hours of the Olympics Monday, from 6:30 to 10:45 p.m. CDT, plus a 15-minute wrapup at 11:15 p.m. Because much of the programming is live, exact events to be shown won't be known until shortly before air time.

Other top attractions Monday include track and field finals in the pole vault, where Americans Earl Bell and Dave Roberts will be shooting for a 1-2 finish; the 200-meter dash, where Millard Hampton could claim a medal; the men's javelin throw; men's 10,000 meters, and women's 800 meters.

It was a sweet victory for Gonzalez. The 13-year-old, who will be a freshman at Yerba Buena High School in San Jose, Calif.,

ARMANDO GONZALEZ...upset former world champion Stanley Kline (on ground) Sunday in AAU wrestling.

A Little Sweat Brings Big Victory

By DAVE SITTLER

A bundle of hard work has brought Armando Gonzalez a long way from San Jose

Gonzalez showed Sunday what a little sweat, toil and determination can accomplish as he took a giant step toward the 101-pound division of the AAU Grand National Wrestling Championships.

Gonzales, who used a "hip throw" to discard Kline in quick fashion, is eyeing a spot on the American team which will represent the United States in the world schoolboy championships in August in Minneapolis.

Competing in the event being held at Nebraska Wesleyan's Ira J. Taylor Gym for boys 14-years-old and under, Gonzalez pinned former world champion Stanley Kline of Las Vegas, Nev., in 2:44 of the second period.

Competing in the event being held at Nebraska Wesleyan's Ira J. Taylor Gym for boys 14-years-old and under, Gonzalez pinned former world champion Stanley Kline of Las Vegas, Nev., in 2:44 of the second period.

Sunday all that work started to pay off as he easily handled Kline. Kline was the world schoolboy champion last year in the 77-pound class.

"I want to be a part of the American team because I think we'll be the strongest team there," Gonzales said.

If Gonzales is able to win the this fall, has been waiting four years to come to the national championships.

"I wasn't that worried about him (Kline) because I've beaten him several times before," Gonzales said.

Gonzales, who used a "hip throw" to discard Kline in quick fashion, is eyeing a spot on the American team which will represent the United States in the world schoolboy championships in August in Minneapolis.

Armando decided staying home while other guys won his title was a bunch of baloney. So, along with his father Oscar, Armando worked at selling raffle tickets to car washes and numerous other money raising events to accumulate the funds to make the trip to Lincoln.

The 14 champions which are crowned in Lincoln will comprise the American team. They will train in Lincoln for five days before going to Minneapolis for the world games.

"I want to be a part of the American team because I think we'll be the strongest team there," Gonzales said.

If Gonzales is able to win the crown, it will be his second national crown in less than a year. He was invited to the Mexican National Championships where he claimed the 101-pound title by scoring seven pins in eight matches.

"They (Mexicans) were not that good of wrestlers," said Gonzales, a proud Mexican-American, "but they were mean."

With her failure—her teammates' failure, really—Sunday night, Ender wound up the Games tied with Holland's Fanny Blanks-Koen, who won four gold medals in track at the 1948 Olympics in London.

Her little, white-haired grandmother, Rosalae Lehmann, however, was happy just to get the chance to see Kornelia in person. She and her husband, Enders' step-grandfather, held a private reunion over "cookies, white wine, chocolates and coffee" in the Olympic Village with Ender and her fiancee, Roland Matthes, who won four backstroke gold medals for East Germany in 1968 and 1972.

"Everything went very well," Mrs. Lehmann said. "I said, 'guten tag, Kornelia,' and she hugged me and I hugged her."

"I cried and she had tears in her eyes, too. I asked how she is, and how is the family. She was very happy."

Kornelia had hoped to be able to repay the gifts with a fifth gold medal, but the Americans took care of that.

Monday night, however, another team of young Americans start the drive for the game the country is waiting for. The U.S. Olympic basketball team has a 10 p.m. semifinal date against Canada and the winner will play the winner of the Russia-Yugoslavia semifinal in Tuesday night's tie-game.

Track and field finals on Monday's schedule include the 10,000 meters, where Lasse Viren of Finland is the defender, and the pole vault featuring Americans Dave Roberts and Earl Bell, who exchanged world records this year.

Lockhart Wins Midwest Race

By KEN HAMBLETON

Craig Lockhart moved to the inside on the fourth turn of the 20th lap and slid past Dick Jensen to gain the lead and go on to win the 25-lap super stock feature race Sunday night at Midwest Speedway.

Lockhart of Red Cloud, who has never finished lower than third place at Midwest, started in the seventh spot in the 15-car field and quickly jumped into contention for the lead.

Billy Myers took the early lead in the race after passing Al Truax on the second lap but two laps later, Jensen, the point leader, zipped in front and quickly jumped into contention for the lead.

Les Schaefer of Garland won his first hobby stock feature race of the year, nipping trophy dash winner Rick Paulus by less than a car length in the 15-lap main sportsman event.

Schaefer took the lead on the first lap after a restart on the second lap and stayed ahead of traffic and trouble throughout the contest. But Paulus, who started 12th in the 15-car field, worked his way up to second on the 11th lap when he passed Lincoln Bob Loll on the back straightaway.

Then with a quarter-lap difference between the leader and the second place, Paulus made up the difference in the final three laps. But on the final turn Paulus went high in the turn allowing Schaefer to gain the slight edge he needed to win.

The game is scheduled to begin at 10 p.m. EDT. The Soviet Union faces Yugoslavia in the other semifinal. The two winners meet for the gold medal Tuesday night.

The network will televise 4½ hours of the Olympics Monday, from 6:30 to 10:45 p.m. CDT, plus a 15-minute wrapup at 11:15 p.m. Because much of the programming is live, exact events to be shown won't be known until shortly before air time.

Other top attractions Monday include track and field finals in the pole vault, where Americans Earl Bell and Dave Roberts will be shooting for a 1-2 finish; the 200-meter dash, where Millard Hampton could claim a medal; the men's javelin throw; men's 10,000 meters, and women's 800 meters.

shot bad the other came through."

Straub said he and Warren are different style bowlers. He characterized himself as weak on spares but able to throw a lot of strikes. Warren, on the other hand, was counted on as a solid spare shooter.

"That was why we were setup for me to shoot last," Straub said. "Except on TV, Tom came through on the strikes in the tenth frame and I wasn't even needed."

"That close game against Hudson and Wilcox, Tom really came through because he had to strike on the tough lane (the left) and he did," Straub added.

In the championship match, Straub said the key shot came when Dickinson, shooting on the easier right lane, left a solid seven-pin in the first frame.

"We were pretty sure Pappas would not strike on his first shot on the left lane unless he just got lucky — and he didn't strike," said Straub.

"The press made some fun of Tom's false steps, but that's just his style," added Straub. "Let me tell you, though, he came through time and time again. He's a great bowler."

Straub Scores First PBA Tourney Victory

By BOB MOYER

Lincolite Bill Straub crossed the bridge Sunday, but when he made it to the other side, the chasm didn't look as big as before.

Straub, bowling with Tom Warren of St. Joseph, Mo., won his first Professional Bowlers' Association title by capturing the $80,000 Best Ball Doubles Classic at the Showboat Lanes in Las Vegas, Nev.

Straub and Warren picked up $5,000 each for the win, culminating in a 280-248 thrashing of Gary Dickinson and George Pappas. Earlier, starting from third place, Straub and Warren took care of fourth-place Earl Anthony and Gary Mage 289-258 and second-place Tom Hudson and John Wilcox, 280-279.

"The gap between the winner and a non-winner seemed awfully large," said Straub. "But after crossing the bridge, it really doesn't seem such a big thing."

In winning, Straub and Warren, who also picked up his first PBA victory, had to best some of the game's greats in cluding Anthony.

Nevertheless, Straub said he and Warren were more worried about the condition of the lane than the competition.

"In the first TV match, Paul Colwell and Don Johnson shot only 202, which is terrible — like bowling 150 in singles. We were a little concerned the lanes would be different than we had been used to earlier in the tournament," said Straub.

"We felt all along that if the lanes were right we could win," he added. "On my first ball, I was determined not to get a washout like I did in Denver (TV PBA appearance). I set it down short, but got a Brooklyn and then I got lined up and had three strikes in a row. By the fifth frame of that game, we knew we had a real good chance to win it all."

Straub said the key to the victory was the way he and Warren constantly came to each other's rescue.

"Most of the teams depended on one guy being hot," Straub said. "But for us, when one guy shot bad the other came through."

Straub said he and Warren are different style bowlers. He characterized himself as weak on spares but able to throw a lot of strikes. Warren, on the other hand, was counted on as a solid spare shooter.

"That was why we were setup for me to shoot last," Straub said. "Except on TV, Tom came through on the strikes in the tenth frame and I wasn't even needed."

Bill Straub
Teams Up For Win

"That allowed us to get the lead in the first frame and in a doubles competition like this, that's a tremendous advantage," he said.

Straub also cited the factor of having a teammate relying on him as important in garnering the win.

"I've always had a motivation problem," said Straub. "But with the dependency on him of holding me up and me not letting him down, things worked out real well."

"The press made some fun of Tom's false steps, but that's just his style," added Straub. "Let me tell you, though, he came through time and time again. He's a great bowler."

Horse Workouts Requested

Lincoln racing enthusiast Leo Scherer wants more information about the horse races.

He discusses a lack of workouts and races in a letter sent to Harry Farnham, chairman of the Nebraska State Racing Commission. What Scherer says is a constant problem with horse racing today.

"I would like to urge the Commission to take the necessary steps to see that horses are not allowed to enter races unless all known workouts are published in the Daily Racing Form or some other place available to racing fans. It is my opinion that horses are being run on the Nebraska circuit that show no workouts in the Form, but, in fact, have had authorized workouts. These important workouts are known to a few horsemen, owners, employees and insiders, but not the average fan."

"There has been repeated horses winning in Grand Island and Omaha that show no workouts and no actual races for over one month and sometimes longer. Many of these horses, in my opinion, couldn't be winning so regularly without some sort of workouts, regardless of times, at the entered track."

"The failure of the average racing fan to know about these workouts is a very unfair disadvantage and is a definite step backward in handicapping."

"I respect Nebraska horse racing but I feel a constant effort must be made to give the average fan a chance against the insiders. Requiring all known workouts and the times to be published would be another step forward."

Valid Points

In thanking Mr. Scherer for his letter, it is almost impossible for me to dispute any of his arguments. But as long as horsemen are interested in cashing a bet at the mutual windows as they are in winning a purse, trickery is going to exist in horse racing.

Probably the worst example of what the gentleman is describing occurred in a maiden race at last year's State Fairgrounds' meet in Lincoln.

The horse in question was a first-time starter. (At least, that's what was reported in the Daily Racing Form.) Insiders knew the horse was undefeated in several starts at unrecognized bush tracks in Kansas.

All of a sudden, the horse was bet to 4-5 favoritism, won by six lengths and made a mockery of Nebraska horse racing. It's cases like that not only put the average fan at a severe disadvantage but make a joke of everything horse racing officials in this state claim is not.

True, the horse was a solid favorite at the mutual windows which should have indicated to the unknowing public that something was amiss.

But examples such as that do nothing to enhance what track operators and officials realize is basically an honest sport.

The vast majority of horsemen are honest and aren't playing games either in workouts or races. But even if workouts were required before a horse was allowed in race, what's to prevent dishonest horsemen from giving the horse a slow work, work him around the turns rather than the straightaway or put a 160-pound exercise boy on the horse?

The very nature of the thoroughbred horse racing makes it inviting for shady characters to perform questionable acts to cash large bets at the windows or to win big purses. Working horses in private, giving them races at unrecognized tracks or asking jockeys "not to push them" in races isn't honest. But it happens.

Mr. Scherer's suggestion may not be the total answer. But it's a start in the right direction. Honest horsemen should have no objections. If the dishonest ones mind, who cares?

Connors, Ramirez In Finals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Topranked Jimmy Connors and No. 5 seed Raul Ramirez scored easy victories Sunday to breeze into the singles final of the $125,000 Washington State International Tennis Championships.

Connors, the No. 2 seed who took top billing when defending champion Guillermo Vilas withdrew because of an injury prior to the tournament, needed just about one hour to dispose of Ray Moore of South Africa, 6-2, 6-1, and gain Monday night's final round.

Ramirez, Mexico's top player, also used only an hour to oust Brian Fairlie of New Zealand, 6-2, 6-2, and earn a chance at the $20,000 first prize.

Moore and Fairlie, both of whom earned $5,000 in losing, said that gusts of wind on the public court during the matches affected play even though both conceded they doubted they could have won because of the way Connors and Ramirez handled themselves on the court.

Derby Race Gets Joachim

Omaha — Joachim, who set a record for money won in one year at Ak-Sar-Ben, heads the field for Saturday's $50,000-added Lincoln Derby. The Derby, at a mile and one-sixteenth, is the premier three-year-old race during the Nebraska State Fair meeting which continues at Ak-Sar-Ben through Aug. 7.

Racing Secretary Bob Pollock has assigned Joachim highweight of 124 pounds off victories in the $100,000-added Omaha Gold Cup and the $50,000-added President's Cup.

Owned by Mrs. Edith Pratt and Jack Van Berg, Joachim is the first $100,000 winner at Ak-Sar-Ben as he earned $109,342.

Ak-Sar-Ben's top filly, Roger's Choice, actually is high weight with 120 pounds. However, Trainer Louis Brandt indicated after her victory in the Pioneers Stakes that it would be her last race.

"Jimmy hits the ball so hard, constantly keeping the pressure on you," said Moore.

"With the wind the ball came even harder. He was on his game. He kept the ball in play and caused me to make errors."

Connors admitted he had had an easy time of it, adding, though, it was because Moore did not play as well as he normally does.

"I'm glad he wasn't up to his usual game," Connors said. "I had a rough match Saturday and also played doubles, so I played a lot of tennis. I was glad to get in control early in the Moore match."

Connors had only one difficult match in reaching the finals, defeating Eddie Dibbs of Miami in the quarter-final round, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, on a hot, humid afternoon. In two previous matches he lost only three games to Geoff Masters and Roger Taylor after defeating Fred McNair 6-4, 6-4.

Ramirez said he had been hitting the ball well all week but, he said, in his match against Fairlie he was "able to concentrate more and I moved well."

Fairlie agreed, saying, "He played very well and didn't miss a ball. I did not play well."

To reach the finals, Ramirez defeated Pat Cramer, Jeff Austin, Ismail El Shafei of Egypt and Dick Stockton of Dallas, the last, 6-2, 6-4, in Saturday's quarter-final round.

In the doubles semifinals, the No. 1-seeded team of Ramirez and Brian Gottfried defeated the Amitraj brothers, Vijay and Anand, of India.

In the other semifinal, Connors and Arthur Ashe, playing together for the first time and seeded No. 5 in the tournament, defeated the No. 2 seeds, Fred McNair IV of Chevy Chase, Md., and Sherwood Stewart 6-3, 6-0.

The winner of the Ramirez-Gottfried and Connors-Ashe match Monday night will receive $7,000 while the losers pick up $3,500.

Hot Finish Gives Pate Open Title

Pate played the final round like he owned the par-70, 6,696-yard Essex Golf Club course here.

He made birdies at the first, third, fifth and ninth holes to make the turn in four-under par 31. Two more birdies at 10 and 11 made it three in a row before he took his lone bogey of the round on the par-three, 187-yard 12th.

But he started his birdie barrage again with a three at the 384-yard 15th and added another at the 384-yard 16th. He closed his round with pars on the last two holes, a 221-yard, par-three 17th and the 428-yard 18th.

Pate, of Pensacola, Fla., earned his PGA player's card only last fall. He gave his fellow professionals an indication of things to come when he finished fourth in the Memorial Tournament in Dublin, Ohio at the end of May and came back the next week to take third money at the Philadelphia Classic.

Jack Nicklaus shot a closing round 65 that put him in at nine-under par 271, good for the runnerup prize of $22,800. It was the fourth time Nicklaus finished second in the Canadian Open, the only major national title he has never won.

The $40,000 first prize pushed Pate's PGA earnings this year to $128,482, the most ever won by a tour rookie. Lanny Wadkins set the previous mark of $116,616 in 1972.

N.Y.'s Steinbrenner Terms Story 'A Claim'

New York (UPI) — George Steinbrenner III, the board chairman of the American Shipbuilding Company and one of the principal owners of the New York Yankees, said Sunday a Cleveland Plain Dealer story claiming he ordered employees six years ago to charge illegal campaign contributions to government contracts was just that — a claim.

Steinbrenner, a general partner of the Yankees, was convicted in August 1974 of arranging, and then covering up, illegal campaign contributions made from 1970 to 1973. He was charged in the copyrighted newspaper account Sunday with charging campaign contributions off to the government.

"It involves American Shipbuilding Company making a claim and the Federal Government of making a counter claim," Steinbrenner said in an announcement denying the charges made through a Yankee spokesman. "It's a simple matter being handled in a Cleveland Court of Claims, which is just a routine procedure."

The newspaper also said the Justice Department has information Steinbrenner destroyed or ordered the destruction of financial records in April 1973, pertaining to the contributions.

Steinbrenner, the article said, then filed suit against the U.S. in 1974 to recover $5.4 million in cost overruns on a government contract. The cost overruns, government sources told the newspaper, included thousands of dollars in hidden, illegal campaign payments which were hidden in the company's general and specific overhead expenses.

The allegations reportedly are to be revealed Monday in a Justice Department countersuit to be filed against American Ship in the Washington,

The United States played the Canadian team only once this year, winning, 85-74, earlier this month in an exhibition game at Plattsburgh, N.Y. The American team played without All-American forward-center Scott May, who was bothered by a minor case of bronchitis. His presence should help the U.S.

"I think the crowd should affect the officials. When you have that many people screaming and yelling at a referee for making a call against Canada, he'll stop and think before he does it the next time."

The Canadians have never beaten the Americans in Olympic basketball. Only one team has, Russia, which plays in the other semifinal.

That's how many seats he figures Canadians will occupy at the sellout 16,000-seat Forum, which has displaced the 4,000-seat Etienne Desmarteau now that the medals are about to be decided.

"I'd be very surprised if the crowd weren't overwhelmingly pro-Canada," said Donohue. "I expect at least 12,000 of them will be Canadians and I hope most of the other 4,000 are neutral. I hope the crowd goes bananas. We need every edge we can get."

Hot Finish Gives Pate Open Title

WINDSOR, Ont. (UPI) — Jerry Pate Sunday became the golf champion of North America, adding the $40,000 first prize in the Canadian Open to the U.S. Open crown he won a month ago.

The 22-year-old Pate, who was second starting the final round, two strokes off the eight-under pace set by Bob Wynn, fired a course-record seven-under-par 63 to go with rounds of 69-67-68, finishing at 13-under-par 267 for the tournament.

Jack Nicklaus shot a closing round 65 that put him in at nine-under par 271, good for the runnerup purse of $22,800. It was the fourth time Nicklaus finished second in the Canadian Open, the only major national title he has never won.

The $40,000 first prize pushed Pate's PGA earnings this year to $128,482, the most ever won by a tour rookie. Lanny Wadkins set the previous mark of $116,616 in 1972.

Pate, of Pensacola, Fla., earned his PGA player's card only last fall. He gave his fellow professionals an indication of things to come when he finished fourth in the Memorial Tournament in Dublin, Ohio at the end of May and came back the next week to take third money at the Philadelphia Classic.

N.Y.'s Steinbrenner Terms Story 'A Claim'

New York (UPI) — George Steinbrenner III, the board chairman of the American Shipbuilding Company and one of the principal owners of the New York Yankees, said Sunday a Cleveland Plain Dealer story claiming he ordered employees six years ago to charge illegal campaign contributions to government contracts was just that — a claim.

Steinbrenner, a general partner of the Yankees, was convicted in August 1974 of arranging, and then covering up, illegal campaign contributions made from 1970 to 1973. He was charged in the copyrighted newspaper account Sunday with charging campaign contributions off to the government.

"It involves American Shipbuilding Company making a claim and the Federal Government of making a counter claim," Steinbrenner said in an announcement denying the charges made through a Yankee spokesman. "It's a simple matter being handled in a Cleveland Court of Claims, which is just a routine procedure."

The newspaper also said the Justice Department has information Steinbrenner destroyed or ordered the destruction of financial records in April, 1973, pertaining to the contributions.

Steinbrenner, the article said, then filed suit against the U.S. in 1974 to recover $5.4 million in cost overruns on a government contract. The cost overruns, government sources told the newspaper, included thousands of dollars in hidden, illegal campaign payments which were hidden in the company's general and specific overhead expenses.

The allegations reportedly are to be revealed Monday in a Justice Department countersuit to be filed against American Ship in the Washington,

Super Stocks

Montreal (UPI) — Canadian coach Jack Donohue can think of at least 12,000 good reasons why his team can upset the United States in the Olympic basketball semifinals Monday night.

That's how many seats he figures Canadians will occupy at the sellout 16,000-seat Forum, which has displaced the 4,800-seat Etienne-Desmarteau now that the medals are about to be decided.

"I'd be very surprised if the crowd weren't overwhelmingly pro-Canada," said Donohue. "I expect at least 12,000 of them will be Canadians and I hope most of the other 4,000 are neutral. I hope the crowd goes bananas. We need every edge we can get."

I think the crowd should affect the officials. When you have that many people screaming and yelling at a referee for making a call against Canada, he'll stop and think before he

Pate played the final round like he owned the par-70, 6,696-yard Essex Golf Club course here.

He made birdies at the first, third, fifth and ninth holes to make the turn in four-under par 31. Two more birdies at 10 and 11 made it three in a row before he took his lone bogey of the round on the par-three, 187-yard 12th.

But he started his birdie barrage again with a three at the 364-yard 15th and added another at the 384-yard 16th. He closed his round with pars on the last two holes, a 221-yard, par-three 17th and the 428-yard 18th.

Pate, of Pensacola, Fla., earned his PGA player's card only last fall. He gave his fellow professionals an indication of things to come when he finished fourth in the Memorial Tournament in Dublin, Ohio at the end of May and came back the next week to take third money at the Philadelphia Classic.

Ship Passengers Voice Complaints

LONDON (AP) — Angry passengers disembarked Sunday from the fire-damaged ocean liner Queen Elizabeth 2, complaining about "total confusion" on board ship and Cunard Lines' "ludicrous" offer of compensation for the shortened cruise from England to New York.

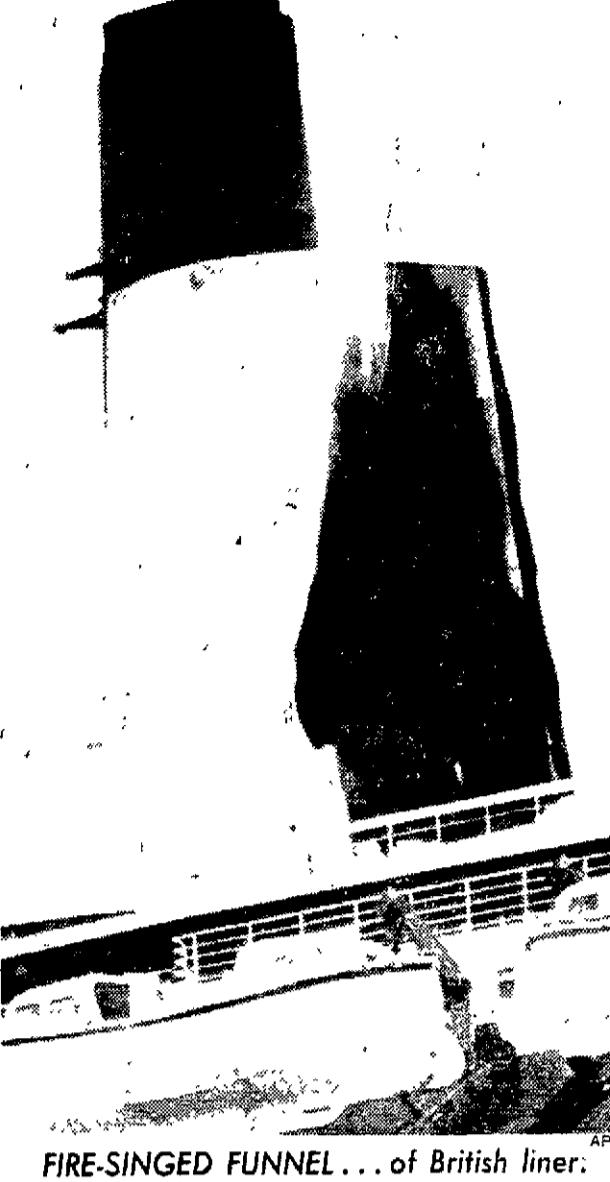

About 900 of the 1,200 passengers who were aboard the British liner when fire started in the engine room at dawn Friday were to go on to New York by airplane. Nearly 800 of the passengers are American.

Some travelers said a few persons had refused to leave the ship until they received better offers of compensation. Cunard denied that report. Others said a number of passengers had formed a group to take legal action against Cunard.

The majority of the passengers, however, indicated they were satisfied with Cunard's offer of a 20 per cent refund on their fare and a jet flight to New York. Some chose to give up the refund and accepted an offer of a 50 per cent reduction on a future QE2 passage.

Cunard's managing director, John Mitchell, told a news conference on board ship Sunday police had ruled out "any suggestion of sabotage" in the fire.

Probes By Grand Juries Create Unrest On Navajo Reservation

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP) — Investigations by two federal grand juries "linger like a black cloud" over America's largest Indian group, says the Navajo tribe's general counsel.

"The probes by grand juries in Phoenix and Albuquerque are creating a certain amount of unrest and confusion," said George P. Vlassis.

"When there is nibbling at the heels of government for a considerable period of time it is bound to create unrest," the Phoenix lawyer said in an interview.

A federal grand jury in Albuquerque in July began investigating financial dealings of certain Navajo enterprises conducting business in the New Mexico portion of the vast reservation.

"I guess we need one more in Utah," quipped Tribal Chairman Peter MacDonald.

A small portion of the 25,000 square mile reservation extends into southeastern Utah.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs estimates 150,000 Navajos live on the 16.5-million-acre reservation.

"If the United States had Watergate, the Navajos can get through the difficulties facing them," MacDonald said in an interview.

MacDonald said he hasn't been subpoenaed to appear before either grand jury.

He has said he has "nothing to hide" from federal investigators, which include the FBI and the Justice Department.

"I feel, if you look back in history, every nation had problems and difficulties," said the 48-year-old MacDonald. "The Navajo Nation is no exception."

MacDonald is in the second year of a second, four-year elected term. He recommended Vlassis' hiring when he took office in 1971.

"The future is going to be better," MacDonald said. "We will correct our problems."

MacDonald, who receives a $30,000 annual salary, said, "Whatever they (the grand juries) discover here, you'll find in every government. Humans are humans."

"When there is nibbling at the heels of government for a considerable period of time it is bound to create unrest," the Phoenix lawyer said in an interview.

For more than a year, two separate grand juries in Phoenix have considered information concerning what the U.S. attorney's office in Arizona calls financial irregularities.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 5 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to test your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
